

"American Credit Still Strongest In World," Bankers Are Told

96 PCT. OF U. S. BANKS NOT HIT IN SUSPENSIONS

"Will to Conquer to See Us Through Difficulties," Report Says

Atlantic City, N. J.—(P)—American bankers today launched an assault on the nation's economic problems.

Criticizing the critics of the banking structure and pleading for a perspective picture of a serious situation, the economic policy commission of the American Bankers' association presented its report to the first general session of the association's convention.

The report is not voted on by the convention, but bankers take it to represent the views of financial men and regard it as particularly important at this time.

"In common with the rest of the world our country is being forced to face many serious problems, but American credit is still the strongest in the world," the report says.

"We hold in this crisis a large part of the world's monetary gold. It is still fundamentally true that where the gold is, the strength lies."

We have no doubt that America's indomitable will to conquer will see us through the present difficulties as it has seen us through similar difficulties in the past.

The facts are that while 4 per cent of the banks as to numbers were permanently or temporarily closed in the first eight months of the year, some 96 per cent were not involved and furthermore that only 1.2 per cent of the deposits were tied up, which means that only almost 89 per cent were not affected.

Distorted Views
"It is obvious in view of the foregoing that an exaggerated and distorted view of the banking situation has been created in the public mind by focusing attention solely on the bank failure figures unrelated to the broader situation of which they are but a part."

"It surely stands strikingly to the credit of the banking profession that during this period, this vast majority of the bankers have so completely, so courageously and so successfully met their difficulties and obligations."

The effect of the drought, the demoralization of agriculture, the stagnation of industry, the breakdown of trade, the inability of so many heretofore creditable customers to meet their obligations to the banks, the impairment of public confidence by mob scares and false rumors, the abnormal depreciation of quoted security values even in the most wisely conceived investment accounts, the utter collapse of real estate values—all these things occurred on a nation-wide and world-wide scale.

"We sincerely feel that the fate of the relatively few banks and the acts of a small number of bankers have had an absolutely disproportionate effect on public confidence in banking as a whole."

"We feel that it is the great public task of the banking profession and of all business interests as well for their own protection to restore that confidence."

FINDS BOOTLEGGING THRIVES IN ARABIA

Milwaukee—(P)—In Arabia, too, there is bootlegging.

Liquor, phonographs and tobacco are prohibited in the region inhabited by the Wahabites, and the manner in which the law is circumvented was described here by Charles E. Dickerson, United States commercial attaché at Cairo, Egypt. Mr. Dickerson is here conferring with manufacturers who wish to stimulate trade with Egypt and the Near East.

Probably the chief market for liquor in Arabia is provided by the pilgrim to Mecca, who develops a thirst while traversing the parched desert. The Arabian bootlegger accommodates the market and does not have much trouble doing so because the flowing gowns of the desert tribesmen cover a dozen bottles very neatly. Smuggling a phonograph, even under the copious robes, is more difficult.

The business recession is even more apparent in the Near East than in America. Mr. Dickerson informed Milwaukee business men. Those pilgrims to Mecca, for instance, normally number about 100,000 a year. Now they visit the holy city at the rate of about 40,000 yearly.

And in some instances it is possible. Mr. Dickerson reported, to buy certain types of Persian rugs cheaper in New York than in Persia.

District Gathering Opens This Morning at Lincoln School

The annual high school supervisory conference of this district opened at 9:30 this morning at Lincoln school under the direction of J. T. Giles, Madison, state instructor of high schools of the state department of public instruction. The meetings was attended by county superintendents, county supervisors, high school and junior high school principals of Appleton and neighboring towns.

The courses of study and the teaching methods in English and mathematics in secondary schools were discussed this afternoon.

These supervisory conferences have been held in Wisconsin for the last five years for the purpose of detailed study of methods in secondary schools by the supervisors and principals. There are 35 such conferences held throughout the state during the months of September, October and November. About 20 schools are represented in each district.

LIQUOR NOT SEIZED ON ADAMS' ESTATE

Scituate, Mass.—(P)—Three Boston men who cached 600 cases of liquor in a barn near the summer estate of Charles Francis Adams, secretary of the navy, were freed last night in $2,500 bail each.

First reports that the barn was situated on the Adams estate were corrected later by police and coast guards.

The barn was situated on the land close to the border of the secretary's land. Police made the raid on the barn early yesterday after several automobiles passing to and from the direction of the barn had aroused their suspicion. The liquor was valued at about $50,000.

Shores near the Adams property have been used as a landing place for liquor previously.

Throw Away Your Corn Plasters

Here's a better way to keep those miserable, stinging, painful corns from hurting! That gets rid of the corns themselves—without drawing a drop of blood! No cutting, no pulling out, no punicing.

Just rub your corns briskly with Moore's Emerald Oil at bedtime, if you want to get rid of them quickly. Binding the part with a cloth soaked in the oil will further speed the process.

Takes the sting right out—soothes your tortured feet at once. Corns won't hurt next day, either. And in a day or two they'll be all gone for good. They just shrivel up and scale off—so easy as anything.

LABOR CHARGES CAPITAL WITH BROKEN FAITH

"Seven Milestones of Prosperity" Outlined by Executive Council

Vancouver, B. C.—(P)—Delegates to the annual convention of the American Federation of Labor swung today into the business of planning for the return to industrial stability with capital accused of having "broken faith" in lowering wages.

Committees, on the second day of the convention, prepared resolutions and criticisms designed to head the national body toward its "seven milestones of prosperity."

William Green, the president, speaking at a banquet last night charged that employers had violated pledges they made to President Hoover and organized labor of the nation at a Washington conference to maintain the wage standard of the United States.

Green said, asked to guard against strikes and avoid the "unrest always fomented before in times of depression" has "never violated its pledges."

"The record has been made," Green added. "Those men, employers who solemnly promise the president of the United States to maintain the wage standard broke their promise. They violated their pledge not to reduce wages."

"There sat at that conference representatives of the United States Steel corporation. Last week, or week before last the United States Steel corporation made a 10-per cent reduction in wages."

"I leave it to you to decide who can be depended upon to keep their pledged word in time of crisis."

"Right to Work"

Green, in opening the convention, said labor might well add "the right to work" to the bill of rights.

"The great army of the unemployed," he said, "stands as a menace to the existing social order. No urge is as powerful as the hunger instinct. It cannot be controlled by social laws."

Interest was divided today between the executive council's report and an address by Senator James J. Davis, former secretary of labor. W. N. Doak, incumbent labor secretary, who had been invited to speak, announced at Washington he would be unable to attend.

The executive council report, comprising a record of the achievements of the past year and a summary of means tending to relieve unemployment and depression, was divided among committees for study, comment and action.

Here are the seven schemes advocated:

1. A conference to divide available work.
2. Shorter working hours.
3. Keep the United States wage standard.
4. Guarantee their jobs to those working now.
5. No child labor.
6. Stabilize industry so everybody will work all the time.
7. Balance supply and demand, with beer to galvanize both into action.

GARNER MAKES FIRST FLIGHT IN "DANG" PLANE—2,000 MILES

Washington—(P)—A 2,000 mile flight for his first airplane trip did not disturb Representative John N. Garner of Texas, 62-year-old Democratic leader.

The white-haired Texan crawled out of the open cockpit of an army airplane at Bolling field late yesterday after a fast flight from his home in Unvalde, away down in South Texas.

"It did not bother me even if it was the first time I was ever in one of the dang things," Garner said. "As soon as I got used to the noise, it sang me to sleep. It was tiresome, when I was awake, because I couldn't do anything but sit."

Garner breakfasted at home Sunday morning and stopped a short time in Muskogee, Okla., and St. Louis. He spent the night at Dayton, and arrived here after noon Monday. He and his pilot, Lieut. William Olds, encountered a rain and electrical storm and had to fly above it to get through. The Texan said he "got sorta cold, away up there at 6,000 feet."

Garner declined to disclose the purpose of his hurried visit but it was learned he would attend a conference at the White House tonight.

Wednesday he plans to travel to Unvalde by airplane to remain until shortly before congress convenes Dec. 7. He approves of flying and expects to wing back over the southern route.

LEGION POST FAVORS VOTE ON DRY LAW

Approves Action Taken at National Convention Suggesting Referendum

With but three dissenting votes among the 200 or more veterans present, One Johnston post of the American legion last night went on record as being in sympathy with the action taken at the national convention of the legion favoring submission of the prohibition question by congress to the people through a national referendum.

There was only a brief discussion. The resolution as originally presented would have put the post on record as in sympathy with the national convention's approval of light wines and beer. It then was pointed out that the national convention had approved a referendum, but did not suggest changing the prohibition law the permit manufacture and sale of light wine and beer. The resolution originally was presented a month ago, but no action was taken at that time.

A copy of the resolution will be forwarded to President Hoover, Wisconsin senators and the state department of the legion.

Last night's meeting opened with a concert by the high school band under direction of E. C. Moore. A piccolo and accordion duo from the 120th field artillery band furnished entertainment after the business meeting.

Committees for the ensuing year were announced, plans for the membership campaign outlined and reports heard on the Detroit convention of the legion. It was suggested the post organize a bowling team, so as to have large representation at the state league bowling tourney.

The next boxing card has been set for Thursday, Oct. 22. It was decided to again hold a joint meeting of the legion and aux.

CREAM PRODUCERS LOSING BY LACK OF ORGANIZATION

Eastern Brokers Would Pay
More if Farmers Banded Together

Madison—(P)—Wisconsin cream producers are losing hundreds of thousands of dollars annually because they are not organized, according to Commissioner J. D. Beck, of the department of agriculture and markets.

He said eastern brokers are willing to pay a premium of 15 cents a pound for butter fat over the Chicago market price but lack of organization in Wisconsin makes it impossible to meet the demand.

"One request just received from Pennsylvania was for a carload of cream per day. At 15 cents a pound above the Chicago market price, Wisconsin cream producers would increase their income by $350,000 a year if they could supply this quantity. The brokers require not only clean, pure cream such as Wisconsin produces, but they must have definite quantities at regular intervals in order to supply their trade."

"Until Wisconsin marketing organizations are able to supply steady volume, they will continue to lose money for their members."

A general warning against hog cholera which recently has broken out in widely separated parts of the state has been issued by Dr. W. Wisnicky, of the state division of livestock sanitation and Dr. J. S. Healy, federal inspector in charge for the United States department of agriculture.

State and federal authorities are cooperating at present to stamp out the cholera in scattered areas in Richland, Dodge, Winnebago, Lafayette, Burnett and Walworth counties.

"With the occurrence of hog cholera in these widely scattered areas an epidemic such as the one in 1926 is to be feared," Dr. Wisnicky said. "The 1926 epidemic caused enormous losses to farmers and everything possible is being done to prevent the spread of the disease.

"Hog cholera, a disease sometimes conveyed from one section of the country to another. Cholera may be innocently brought to the farm by the farmer himself when he brings raw market pork home to eat and the trimmings are later fed to the hogs. If the virus is present, the hogs may become infected that way."

"Feeding city garbage is also responsible for cholera in some instances."

Difficulty with alfalfa and clover and clover bloat among cattle has increased greatly throughout the state since the recent general rains, according to Dr. Wisnicky. He cautioned farmers against using the crop indiscriminately as both clover and alfalfa bloat can quite generally be prevented.

The best procedure varies with different conditions, he said. If cattle are accustomed to grazing on green clover or alfalfa the danger is not as great as when they are turned into a pasture in a hungry condition to take on large quantities of the green feed in a short period of time.

"A good procedure to follow in grazing is to give the cattle a good fill of some dry forage before they are turned out," Dr. Wisnicky said. "Good quality hay is the best to use. Bloating in cattle is more apt to occur when the pasture is wet after rains, during damp and muggy weather, or after heavy dews."

The state federal crop reporting service announces that Wisconsin creamery butter production was out nearly two million pounds as the result of unusually hot, dry August weather.

August butter production estimates indicate that the Wisconsin production was slightly less than 13 million pounds as compared with the 15 million pound production for August, 1930. July production was 10 per cent under a year ago.

Total butter production for the United States was slightly below the August 1930 production, the former being 136,700,000 pounds and last year's 137,400,000 pounds.

Andy Clyde Is 1st Comedy Star Since Talkies Came

BY JESSIE HENDERSON
Copyright, 1931, By Cons. Press
Hollywood—(CPA)—After three years, the Sennett studios have created and announced a star. His name is Andy Clyde, the "Pop Martin" of many a bit and many a featured role, who has been raised to the rank of the first talkie star at the comedy studios. The last star before Clyde was Harry Langdon, in the days of the silent cinema. The rise to stardom means that now Andy Clyde will probably never get that shave.

Clyde, a Scot from Glasgow, is the dreary-whiskered, mild and anxious man who has perhaps more laughs to his credit than any other comedian here. This is partly because he's funny and partly because he appears in almost every Sennett picture. He has trotted his way and wrung his hands through hundreds of thousands of feet of film. In ordinary life, Clyde is anything but melancholy. What's more he's a remarkably good golfer despite his fumbling with brassie and niblick on the screen.

He got the "Pop Martin" job quite by accident. A wizard at make-up, Clyde used to appear 10 and 12 times in a single film, each time so skillfully disguised that you couldn't recognize him from the time before.

The test was not supposed to be in makeup. Through a misunderstanding, however, Clyde appeared in the beard and anxious eyebrows which he had divided and christened "Pop Martin." The test turned out so well that, though this was more than four years ago, Clyde has never had a clean shave since. He hasn't discovered an imitation beard which could take the place of his own, and his vacations are so brief and few that there isn't time to grow a beard all over again between the finished picture and the next picture about to begin.

Beneath his elderly makeup, Clyde owns a young and very good looking set of features. But his face is not his fortune—"Pop Martin" is the face which has launched a thousand quips and incidentally earned more money than Helen of Troy's ever did.

CHEMIST FINDS THERE'S ART IN STIRRING FLUID

Curiosity of Scientist Leads to New Discovery in Massachusetts

Cambridge, Mass.—(CP)—The man who dreams of doing big things while stirring the breakfast food over the kitchen range has been overlooking a valuable industrial discovery right under his nose.

This is shown by announcement of discovery at Massachusetts Institute of Technology of a new chemical law, inspired by noting what happens to a liquid when stirred.

Although breakfast food was not the liquid observed, it affords an easy example of the problem. The clue is what happens to the film that forms on top of the boiling liquid. Everyone knows the film should be stirred, but most everyone's curiosity stops there, one step short of the scientific discovery.

At Massachusetts Tech Dr. H. S. Davis, of the chemistry department, took the added step recently. He was curious to know what would happen if he stirred a liquid beneath its surface, leaving the top unruffled.

A small propeller was sunk in the liquid through a tube resembling a glass "straw" for summer drinks. The surface was watched with a high power microscope.

The top film stood considerable agitation from beneath before the surface film broke to any extent, and Dr. Davis' observations led to discovery of the law applying to mixing gas into a liquid to make a new compound, something done daily on a big scale by commercial manufacture.

It shows that the rate at which the two substances can be mixed is often limited solely by the speeds at which they can pass through the surface film.

In a report to the American Chemical society Dr. Davis says the law can be extended to hydrogenation, a new method of making gasoline.

DEAN OF WOMEN TELLS WHAT YOUTH WANTS

Milwaukee—(P)—What does youth want?

Mrs. Maude Mendenhall, dean of women at Carroll college, speaking to the Wauwatosa Women's club, hazarded a few answers to the question.

Intellectually, youth wants to "get by," Dean Mendenhall said. Socially, "the sky is the limit." Physically, youth wants health and vigor, and economically it asks for independence and occupational satisfaction, the dean believes.

"The Friday night beau and the Saturday night bath are things of the past," she continued. Youth wants beaux and baths oftener. And the education and development of this new youth is a challenge to parents and school masters, she said.

"Personally, I believe our youth is cleaner morally and physically than the youth of former generations," Dean Mendenhall concluded.

Continue Efforts To Learn How John Kampe, Neenah Was Killed

JURY TAKEN TO VIEW SCENE OF FATAL ACCIDENT

Doctor Testifies He Can't Be Certain Dead Man Was Hit by Car

District Attorney Stanley A. Staudt and Sheriff John Lappen today were still seeking to discover how Henry Kampe, 42, 637 Congress-st., whose body was found on Highway 41 between Kimberly and Appleton early Monday morning, met his death.

A coroner's inquest, called yesterday afternoon, was adjourned until 2 o'clock Thursday afternoon in order to give more time for investigation. Dr. George T. Hegner, in a statement at the inquest yesterday, said that he could not be positive whether Kampe's fatal injuries were caused by an automobile. He said if Kampe died as the result of being struck by a car, that it must have been the hub cap of the machine which hit him. The doctor testified that the upper left side of Kampe's skull was crushed, as if from a terrific blow, and that death had been instantaneous. Dr. Hegner was the only witness to testify.

After hearing Dr. Hegner's statement the jury viewed Kampe's body which had been taken to Bretschneider's funeral home. After viewing the body the jury was taken to view the place where the body was found.

Kampe's body, lying beside the highway near the Ryan cottage on the west side of the road, was discovered about 1:45 Monday by Morris Lehrer, Kaukauna, as he was driving to Kaukauna.

Shoes Were Off
The dead man's shoes were lying about four feet from his body and his hat was about 15 feet away. Lehrer immediately notified Sheriff Lappen, who with District Attorney Staudt started an investigation. The man was identified by his mother, at Neenah, recognized the clothing he wore. His mother said that Kampe left home about 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon, presumably to attend a movie in Neenah or Menasha. She did not see him after that. The district attorney learned that Kampe had been seen by a friend at the corner of Appleton-st. and College-ave. here about 7 o'clock Sunday night.

It is the theory of the district attorney that Kampe was walking along the highway when he was struck by a car, whose driver fled after the accident. The district attorney said that Kampe probably had not tied the laces of his shoes and that they came off when he was hit. Bruises on the man's knees, the district attorney said, evidently were caused when his body was thrown along the road by the impact.

Members of the coroner's jury are: L. C. Jens, E. L. Williams, Joseph Schweitzer, F. A. W. Hammond, Louis Keller and Eugene Dachelet.

Funeral services for Kampe will be held at 2 o'clock Wednesday afternoon at the home of his mother. The services will be conducted by the Rev. E. C. Kollath, pastor of Immanuel Lutheran church. Burial will be at Oak Hill cemetery. Survivors, besides the mother, are one brother, George of Neenah; and four sisters, Mrs. Charles Stewart of Chicago; Mrs. Tod Southard, Milwaukee; Mrs. George Ordish, Wauwatosa; and Mrs. A. J. Kegel, Washington, D. C.

MORROW RITES TO BE HELD WEDNESDAY

permitted to enter to pay their respects.

Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh, who was the second daughter of the Morrors, received word of the tragedy from Mrs. Morrow. It was relayed to the Lindberghs aboard a British battleship off the China coast by the British naval station radio at Shanghai. The message urged them not to hurry home or to change their vacation plans.

Funeral Tomorrow
Funeral services will take place at 3 o'clock tomorrow afternoon at the First Presbyterian church of Englewood, of which the Rev. Dr. Carl H. Elmore, a personal friend of the Morrors, is pastor.

With his death, the political situation in New Jersey became tangled for the time being. His loss stunned his colleagues, who recognized him as the leading Republican opponent of prohibition. His Democratic rivals, who throughout the senatorial campaign had never touched on or criticized his personal or political life in a single speech, sent their regrets to his family and to his party.

Dwight Morrow, a comparative newcomer in politics, was dominant in New Jersey's Republican circles. He was the one man, politicians admitted, who was greater in personal popularity than the offices he hoped to win.

The gubernatorial campaign in New Jersey between former United States Senator Baird, whom Mr. Morrow succeeded, and former Gov. Harry A. Moore has been brought to an abrupt halt by his death.

It was thought in political circles that either Baird, or Walter E. Edge, ambassador to France, might be named by Governor Larson as his successor.

He is survived by his wife, Elizabeth Reeve Cutter, three daughters, Elisabeth, Anne Lindbergh and Constance, and a son, Dwight, W. Jr.

LONDON TREATY HIGH MARK IN MORROW LIFE

Drew Document in Three Days—Others Would Have Required Three Weeks

Washington (P)—To remember all things necessary and forget those which were not was the rule upon which Dwight Whitney Morrow worked in all he attempted.

He ignored formality. Kings and chiefs of states have waited while he stopped another moment to settle a troublesome question.

In working he was indefatigable. Every place he undertook received his entire time. Other questions waited. He was restless in all efforts at recreation and play. Although he enjoyed reading, he seldom took time for it.

One of the most outstanding works in his career was that on the drafting of the London naval treaty. He accomplished in three days that for which diplomatic niceties would have required three weeks. In the midst of the first drafting session, his foreign co-workers remarked it was lunch time.

"Lunch time?" Morrow asked. "There will be no lunch time until we finish this treaty."

The other delegates assented and worked the rest of the day, leaving the room exhausted. Mr. Morrow worked far into the night without food, and continued for three days working 20 hours a day in order that the document be finished.

Disliked Silk Hats
When the American delegation was scheduled to go to Buckingham palace for a formal call on King George, they waited in a London hotel lobby until Mr. Morrow's subordinates could convince him he must wear a silk hat. He told friends that he "hated to wear silk hats."

When the delegation returned to New York and posed for pictures all wore in silk hats except Mr. Morrow. He scorned his fellow delegate's efforts to get him to wear one.

His reputation as a diplomat was spread throughout the world. Of some 30 foreign delegates received by King George, Mr. Morrow was the only one with whom the king took time to talk. It was then that Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh, daughter of Mr. Morrow, was being taught to fly by Colonel Lindbergh.

"How do you like your daughter flying around the country?" the king asked Mr. Morrow.

"I don't like it a little," was the senator's informal, but characteristic, reply.

His desk often was in disorder, but weeks afterward he would remember where he had placed a certain valuable paper. Secretary Stimson, who often called the senator for advice, is meticulous about his desk and would always assign the senator a separate table for his papers, telling him he could "spread them out" as he wanted.

Kept Papers in Pockets
Frequently during diplomatic conferences in London and in Washington, Mr. Morrow would unconsciously place in his pockets valuable documents from the conference table with the idea of studying them later.

At such conferences, Mr. Morrow's secretary often would be asked to search the senator's clothing when papers were missing. They sometimes would be found in the pockets of the suit he wore the day the papers were missed.

POTATOES ARE OF GOOD QUALITY, YIELD SMALL

BY W. F. WINSEY
Hortonville—Potatoes in Outagamie-co are of very good quality but the yield is unusually small this fall. While some of the tubers in the hills are of fairly good size, the balance are small and the number is from three to four. In some fields the late crop has set twice, one cluster near the surface and the other at a lower level. The vines in the most of the fields are green and thrifty and in some of them are in blossom. A number of growers were digging early potatoes Saturday. According to estimates made after an extensive exploration of fields and hills, the early crop is yielding an average of 35 bushels per acre of all sizes and late potatoes an average of 50 bushels. The late crop is still growing and the growth will increase the yield until the fields are dug or a heavy frost comes.

A man of great personal wealth, the senator paid little attention after he entered public life to his daily personal needs for money. His "spending money," as he termed it, was always wadded in a fist-full of bills of both large and small denominations.

He would crumple them together and stuff them in the most convenient pocket. In paying for anything at a store he would frequently pull a fist-full of large bills from his back trousers pocket.

In such transactions as buying cigars—of which he smoked many daily—he would tip the club or steamship attendant 50 cents or more for bringing him a 15-cent pack.

Valet Kept Busy
A valet went with him everywhere. Despite every effort by the servant, however, the senator would appear frequently in public wearing odd trousers and coat—the first he could find in his haste to keep an appointment or be at his desk. To get him to shave—which he preferred to do himself—was an ordeal daily for the valet. Often the senator would flatly decline to shave on morning he was busy, and desired to be early on the job.

White House attaches recall a special overnight trip Mr. Morrow made to Washington last year to confer with President Hoover. When he arrived, his face and neck bore more than half a dozen gashes much deeper than an unwary stroke of a razor usually inflicts. He smilingly admitted he had attempted to shave himself on the train.

He was slight in stature and was not an impressive figure. He spoke with a slight lisp but announcement of his intentions and thoughts on a subject were made with firmness.

PLAN GROUP OF CONFERENCES FOR TEACHERS

Rural School Mentors to Gather at Five Sectional Meetings

Plans have been completed by A. G. Meating, county superintendent of schools, for a series of five rural school teachers conferences in the county on Oct. 13, 14, 15, 20 and 21. At these meetings the teachers will hold conferences on reading, language and arithmetic. The morning will be spent in observing actual teaching methods, while the afternoon will be given over to conferences at which these methods will be discussed.

Mr. Meating, assisted by Miss Nellie McDermott and A. L. Collar, supervising teachers, will be in charge of the conferences. The teacher in charge of the schools where the conferences are held will conduct the classes at the morning session, under supervision of the three county school leaders.

These conferences, Mr. Meating pointed out, will result in the completion of definite plans for a uniform method of teaching in all the schools. The teachers also will set certain goals so that all will conduct their classes to obtain the same results.

Following is the schedule of meetings, with the name of the teacher of the school who will have charge of the classes: Oct. 13, Center Val-

WELLS AS DICTATOR

H. G. Wells, the English author, is always interesting as a purveyor of ideas. It's a good thing to have a few incorrigible futurists running around loose, whether they furnish programs to work toward, or merely provide amusement by their Utopian dreams. This Utopian was in good form in his radio talk the other day. If he were appointed world dictator he would straighten everything out.

First he would declare the world bankrupt, and reduce debts accordingly.

Next he would attend to the little task of abolishing war. He thinks he could do that better than Secretary Kellogg did. He would have the sovereign states of the world "relinquish so much of their national sovereignty as to place control of their relations toward each other in the hands of a federal world authority and peace council." It would be frankly a super-government, pooling its armed forces and using them as international police.

There would be another central body, an economic council to take care of the world's financial and business life, superintending production and distribution.

He would scrap national currencies and have "only one money" in the world. This would be attended to immediately, because the present credit system is breaking down and the world's industrial life is being strangled. Then peace and prosperity would have a chance.

It's all very entertaining, and not necessarily funny—not unless Wells proposes to start his dictating tomorrow morning. Try looking ahead 1,000 years, or 100, and you may find yourself thinking along some of these same lines. But first we may need another World war or two.

HOME LOANS

In his call for a national convention to meet in Washington in December, for discussion of "the whole question of home construction and ownership and home environment" President Hoover has probably emphasized the loan problem as it affects Americans.

It is very evident, as he says, that "the credit system in home loans is not as satisfactorily organized as other branches of credit. Commerce, industry and to a large extent farm loans, all have more effective financial reservoirs."

For many years home owners in most localities have paid a good deal more than they should have for loans, and have found them much harder to get than they should have been. Often local banks, through no fault of their own, were unable to finance this activity. Often general standards and practices were wrong.

It is absurd that sound second mortgage costs should ever have risen to as high as 20 and 25 per cent a year. It is absurd that with all the money idle in bank vaults today, more of it is not available at fair rates for first mortgages, particularly for home building purposes. The financial situation is holding up construction and preventing tens of thousands of families from building or buying homes. Its improvement and we hope the Washington conference will result in definite steps to alter the situation, would do as much as anything to reassure the public and restore business activity to a great degree.

A WORTHWHILE CAMPAIGN

Police determination to put an end to wild and reckless driving on city streets, especially in the vicinity of schools when they are receiving or discharging children, merits the approbation of all Appleton people. More than fifty drivers have been arrested and fined in the last few weeks for flagrant violations of traffic ordinances.

Drivers whose sense of safety is so dulled that they cannot or will not exercise care when there are children on the streets deserve nothing more than a policeman's ticket and a visit to municipal court. If the penalties now imposed are not sufficient to slow down traffic generally to a more safe and sane basis the court might well increase the penalties to a point where a real impression is made.

Until some means can be found for taking children across busy streets without exposing them to the hazards of traffic their only protection is in the care exercised by motorists. The police are to be commended for their determination to make carelessness both expensive and disagreeable.

IN SPITE OF TAMMANY

The governor of New York is adopting the principles of his eminent namesake in the theory that crime and criminals are nothing else but what those names imply.

To Tammany this theory is applicable only in so far as it does not interfere with its party organization.

In his present activities to clean up the city of New York, Governor Roosevelt is running counter to the expressed policies of this powerful element in his own party—an organization exerting great influence in the political affairs of the city and state.

It is not a new situation which is confronting the governor. Many eminent Democrats coming out of New York to positions of national prominence have found themselves in conflict with Tammany.

In 1876 it opposed the presidential nomination of Samuel J. Tilden because of his aggressive leadership in breaking up a corrupt ring and bringing about the conviction and imprisonment of Boss Tweed. Yet Tilden carried the state in spite of the Tiger.

Grover Cleveland felt the sting of its lash. Tammany opposed his nomination in 1884 because of his support of reform legislation. In the national convention, Cleveland was nominated on the second ballot after General Bragg of Wisconsin, in seconding his nomination, had exclaimed, "We love him for the enemies he has made."

Yet because of Tammany, Cleveland did not carry New York in the succeeding election, though losing by the small margin of 1,149 votes. Again in 1892 he was opposed by Tammany, but he was nominated and elected.

It was Tammany's support of Champ Clark in 1912 that caused its disaffection of Bryan and led to the revolt that nominated Wilson.

Tammany's power is unquestioned in its own bailiwick. To oppose it demands a Democrat of courage. Yet history shows that the nation has not been loathe to reward such fortitude.

GEN. BUTLER RETIRES

When Major General Smedley Butler reviewed his marines for the last time at Quantico, the other day, prior to his retirement from the service, his voice broke when he told the leathernecks huskily, "You have given me something to remember the rest of my life."

His emotion is easily understood. He will take many memories with him when he goes into private life. It must be a wrench for an officer to lay aside his uniform after thirty-three years of service, much of which has been in the fullest sense of the word "active" service.

But it works both ways. If the marines have given General Butler a lot to remember he himself has given the marines plenty to remember, too. His occasional indiscretions may have made some of us forget the fact that he has been an exceptionally useful and gallant officer; he has been cited numerous times and has twice won the Congressional Medal for bravery under fire—a record unequalled in the history of United States marine corps. The marine corps caring nothing for his indiscretions will keep his gallantry in mind for a long, long time and cherish the record he made as an officer of the United States' armed forces.

MEXICANS DESTITUTE

Many of us do not appreciate the pitiable state to which many poorer families in this capital are reduced through poverty, and the stress of the long continued economic crisis. When the public markets are closed at night, hundreds of these poor creatures hunt through the spoiled and discarded produce in the effort to find that which will keep soul and body in a miserable existence.

There are said to be numerous families in the district with no other means of subsistence. Another hardship worked upon the people is the exaction of payments due on mortgages. Fortunately, however, inasmuch as property confiscated for failure to liquidate mortgages when due is not subject to ready sale or disposition, parties owning or having possession of the properties are generally allowed to retain their titles on payment of the interest. Taking such matters to the courts generally means expense and loss to both parties to the action, and profits only for the lawyers.—Mexico City.—El Universal.

EN ROUTE to Madison . . . swell new pavement on the once adventurous highway 26 the big house at Waupun where we sang two part harmony for Alma Mater . . . the dog, in the middle of the highway, trying to make motorists drive into the ditch . . . he had a rat out in the middle of the road—playing with it like a cat does . . . wouldn't let a car get near it . . . the hamburgers with onions which kept talking back to us . . . en route to Appleton—lights . . . lights . . . lights . . .

It's funny what difference a hundred miles will make. In Appleton a saloon is a saloon and the door is locked only when the place is closed for the night. In Madison a saloon is a speakeasy and the door is always locked. To get in, the potential customer must knock, be cross-examined by the owner, must show his vaccination mark, birth certificate and driver's license, bring along somebody who knows the proprietor and be ready to give his fingerprints if necessary.

ON BEING X-RAYED

The doctor looked me through and through With fluoroscopic rays; He made me swallow stuff I knew The cooks in good cafes Would never for one moment think Was fit for man or beast to drink, Merely to note how it would act Along my gastronomic tract.

Garbed in a gown they made me tread A round of inky gloom, Much like a candidate being led About the mystic room, "No breakfast" was the pass explained By which admittance there was gained Who seeks the inner light must come Humbling himself to bartum.

That done, in dens of darkness I Was flattened on a board, While with his scientific eye My stomach he explored, Knowing, as bakers do their dough, The place where food is wont to go, Seeking to find the reason why I'd lost all faith in apple pie.

Oh, I've been photographed before By camera and camera men, I've posed a thousand times or more And maybe shall again, But never did I think that I Could swallow barium wet and dry, And tell my stomach: "Pretty look! You're going to have your picture took!" (Copyright, 1931, Edgar A. Guest)

Looking Backward

TEN YEARS AGO

Tuesday, Oct. 4, 1921.

Picked from a long list of Wisconsin heroes of the World war, an Appleton soldier, Sergt. John Hantschel, 920 South Division-st., had been chosen by President Harding to represent the entire state of Wisconsin at the public funeral in the capitol building in Washington Nov. 11, anniversary day for the "unknown soldier."

An application for a marriage license had been made by Stewart L. Erving, Waukesha, and Aileen C. Puzik, Appleton. Joseph H. Schulz and Bernice A. Loesslyoungs, Appleton; George Schumacher and Bernadetta Archambault, Appleton.

A LITTLE BOY WHO GRITS HIS TEETH

Our Montana reader tells me she is a reader of this column but as yet has not read anything about what she is going to ask of me.

Well, I try to give prompt consideration to every letter that conforms to the reasonable rules, but I can't seem to get the racket or organized quite well enough to answer these inquiries before I get 'em.

Then the lady explains. You see, she has a boy of five. He seems perfectly healthy in every way, except that the little rascal gives his parents, aunts and everybody so much anxiety when he is asleep, for he grinds his teeth in his sleep, and he has been doing so for a whole year, and mother and pop and Aunt Mary and even grandma just can't understand why he does it.

Aunt Mary got her dander up, if you can imagine her needing to do any such thing, and asked the doctor about it one day, and the doctor said it was "just nervousness."

However, grandma herself pronounces the child not the least bit nervous, and ma feels pretty sure he has regular hours and a well balanced diet, whatever that may be. I remember Charlie Bradburn used to nibble all around the edges as you come strolling back to the playgrounds to break up the game.

I told here (perhaps it was during the blizzard in Montana) recently how a careful study of a hundred or more children divers shades, some of whom had worms and some of whom had none, had shown that just as any of the kids without worms grut their teeth in sleep as do kids with worms. So that ought to eliminate the Saireygamps from the council.

I also told here recently that gritting the teeth in sleep is sometimes due to too acid urine, which in turn is due to an insufficient proportion of fresh vegetables, fresh fruits and greens or salad relishes in the child's diet.

In all cases of gritting or grinding of the teeth in sleep it is probable that there is a tendency toward spasmodic affections—perhaps call this spasmodic. Such children have spasms or convulsions where normal children would have only restlessness or where older persons might have a chill, as with the onset of any acute febrile illness such as scarlet fever. We don't understand just why certain children are spasmodic about their teeth, but they happen to lack calcium in their blood, bones, soft tissues, nerves. It may be that their calcium metabolism is deficient. It may be that their calcium food supply is deficient. It may be that they get insufficient Vitamin D, or insufficient sunlight (ultraviolet) on naked skin, or both.

Anyway, no harm to try a course of cod liver oil, or viosterol. See that the child gets plenty of the foods suggested, as well as plenty of fresh milk and other dairy products and fresh eggs, cooked and served to suit the child's taste.

The Tinymites

By Hal Cochran

ONE of the parrots on the ship yelled to the Tinies, "Take a trip upon this boat." Wee Scouty laughed and said, "Let's go aboard. I'm sure that we can have some fun. We'll find a rowboat that will run us right out to the ship."

"That's fine," the other Tinies roared. A rowboat took them, as they planned and once on board, the whole bunch scanned the deck and then the captain said, "The birds are in the back. Back to that spot they promptly went and there a half an hour was spent just playing with the parrots. They were here and green and black.

A whistle then blew very loud. The captain bid the Tiny crowd good-bye and then they rowed to shore. The ship sailed out to sea. They watched until it went from sight. The Travel Man said, "Well, we might as well go see some other things. Come on, boys, follow me."

They walked along the dock a bit and shortly found a place to sit and rest. Strange people sauntered by and smiled at all the bunch. It wasn't very long until there came another sudden thrill. Strange ships were pulling toward the dock. Said Scouty, "I've a hunch!"

"Let's run to where they're coming in. That's one place we have not yet been." And so they all hopped to their feet and scampered down the dock. Said Clowzy, "My, how strange they are. I'll bet they've sailed here from afar. What makes them move along so smooth? Just look, they hardly rock!"

"The water's very still, my son. That's why they all so smoothly run," replied the kindly Travel Man. "Those boats are sure a sight. The sails are tipped out very far and, my, just see how large they are. The men must be good sailors to direct those boats just right." (Copyright, 1931, NEA Service, Inc.)

A Bystander In Washington

By HERBERT PLUMMER

Washington—They'll probably be telling the saga of John N. Garner years hence in Texas if that ruddy faced, tousel-headed gentleman from Uvalde, Red River county, becomes the next speaker of the house of representatives.

For certainly the "Honorable Central figure of a story which lends itself to repetition wherever politics is discussed.

Two years ago he assumed leadership of the democratic party in the house under conditions which would seem to make melancholy the most optimistic political strategist.

Democratic membership had been whittled down to the point of a real minority party.

But was Garner downhearted? Hardly. He boasted that under re-consolidated leadership he had hopes that his party would operate more effectively than had been possible for years.

Landslide Survivor

He took over both the floor leader's duties and control of minority committee assignments.

For a long time these functions had been divided between Garner and Fred Garrett of Tennessee, but with the latter out of the picture Garner was in full control.

This division of leadership resulted from the illness and death of Claude Kitchen of North Carolina, leader of the house during war times.

Kitchen delegated Garrett—a master parliamentarian and one of the fastest thinkers on his feet the house has ever known—to look after the floor.

He turned over committee assignments to the next ranking democrat on ways and means. Garner was fourth on this committee, Kitchen being No. 1, Hull of Tennessee (now senator) and Rainey of Illinois next.

Then came the Harding landslide and out went Hull and Rainey. This left Garner arbiter of minority committee assignments after Kitchen's death.

After Garrett's defeat the Texan was left with the whole works. The democrats once again had a unified command—a thing invaluable in any kind of warfare.

Winning Habit

Garner started right in with the bag of political tricks he then 13 consecutive terms in the house had taught him.

He was secure in his seat, for in democratic off years he seems to have no more trouble in coming back to congress than in on years. He soon evidenced that he knew what to do with his wide leadership powers.

Sometimes his friends down in Texas fear that he will not be re-elected. He will make no campaign talks. Yet he always has been victorious just the same

Today's Anniversary

HISTORIC CONGRESS

On Oct. 6, 1917, one of the most memorable sessions of the United States Congress ended.

This, the first session of the Sixty-fifth Congress, began by a special call on April 2, 1917, and the same evening heard President Wilson's address recommending a declaration of war.

More legislation of the most far-reaching order was passed than in any previous session, while the appropriations ran into billions of dollars.

This session will be historical definitely marking the great transformation of the republic, with its early ideas of avoiding entangling alliances, into a mighty world power fully and frankly recognizing that its interests are as wide as humanity itself.

Not the least interesting feature of the session was the extraordinary ascendancy of President Wilson over Congress, receiving authority for practically every war measure he demanded, and successfully resisting those he deemed inadvisable.

Seen And Heard In New York

BY WILLIAM GAINES

New York—If you can teach the fine art of bookbinding, come to New York and hang out your shingle. But hurry, because whenever there is a demand here there is apt to be an over-supply soon.

Right now there is plenty of work awaiting such a teacher, and it is reasonable to suppose, fair money. Bookbinding on a large commercial scale is well taken care of, of course.

What many here want to learn is the distinctive bookbinding of the individual artist, or the fascinating hobby of the amateur, which is fashionable in Europe.

Teachers, if there are any, are in hiding.

Otto Walter Fuhrmann, director of the division of graphic arts, New York university, says so many have inquired at the institution regarding instruction in the fancy covering of tomes that it may prove advisable to offer a special course. That is, if the right person can be found to teach it.

The university, among its courses in printing, touches upon the subject in its lectures. But there is no actual training.

Art and trade schools have been unable to offer information. Three factors are increasing the demand for artistic coverings for books in this country, it seems.

There is the European influence, so strong upon many of our fads and fashions.

Then there is the advanced interior decoration, which recognizes in books one of the most impressive and personal embellishments of the home.

Third, and most important, is the enlarged position of literature in American life, with such writers as Lewis, Cabell, Dreiser and Cather contributing works judged to be of a lasting quality.

Cabbages And Things

Alice Hegen Rice, author of "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch," is a cousin of David J. Alexander, who holds down a responsible editorial job on a paper here. And by the way, Dave, a Shelbyville, Ky., native, looks not much older than the Jackie Coogan who figures in this yarn.

Mrs. Wiggs' creator called upon Dave and his equally youthful looking spouse the other night, chuckling over some of the incidents related to the purchase of talkie rights to her book.

In the first place, the movie company which bought the talkie rights from the producers of the old silent version tried to make a sissy out of Jackie Coogan by announcing he would play the title role.

Later the talkie press agents got things straightened out, and proudly announced the coming production of "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch"—by GENE STRATTON PORTER.

Don't Try To Rush Child In School

BY ANGELO PATRI
You can't rush nature. It is better not to try. Perhaps if I tell you about Donald you will understand why I attach so much importance to the hackneyed fact.

Donald is six years old. He is an extremely intelligent child. His mother admits it and even the neighbors agree. He can read like a fifth grader. He has played with books since his crib days. He can count and use numbers as well as well. And he is very attractive. His smile would bring a bird from a bush.

His body is frail. He is scarcely as big as a minute. You would unhesitatingly place him with the kindergartners at first glance. He has a baby face and his hands are those of a little child. He can't catch with the second graders. He can't run bases nor can he hold his own in the playground when the group starts milling about, snatching caps and slapping backs and tripping unwary idlers. His social age is less than his mental age. His physiological age is less than either.

"I don't think that is wise. He can't hold his own with those bigger older children. They won't let him play with them. They won't accept him. It will tire him to death to try to live with them. It would be far better to keep him in the first year."

"He is a very bright child and I see no reason for his staying back with slower children. I insist upon his being placed in the second grade. If the boys won't play with him they needn't."

Only a fond mother would make a speech like that. Any father knows that it makes a world of difference. If the fellows won't have you then you're out. And being out hurts. It is a terrible handicap for any child especially a young and sensitive creature of six years.

There is no hurry. There can be no hurry where the growth of children is in question. Each child grows according to his nature, if he gets a chance. Now it is plain that this child is lopsided in his growth. His body is behind his intelligence. He must depend upon that body for his success. It won't matter at all if he gets honor marks and is graduated at an extremely early age if he doesn't grow a body to support his intelligence. That growth lies with nature. The best you can do is to supply the best conditions and hope for the best. You can't hurry the job.

There is plenty of time for the school lessons. Any competent coach can teach the subject matter of an elementary grade to an intelligent child in six weeks. But the knowledge will not grow a body for the child. Nor will it give him social standing among his mates. There is a certain process of seasoning that children must undergo before they are fit for hard service. That takes time.

This mistaken pride in the youth of pupils does harm. Far better be proud of the child's healthy body, of his ability to fit in and get along with his companions than to glow with his accomplishments.

75 Women Hear Talk By Bagg

MORE than 75 Appleton club women attended the first geological lecture on the origin and destiny of the earth given by Dr. Rufus Bagg of Lawrence college Monday afternoon at Science hall under auspices of the Appleton Woman's club. This is the first of a series of 14 lectures which Dr. Bagg will present every Monday afternoon.

Dr. Bagg discussed the various cards and music provided the entertainment.

Elk skat players held their weekly tournament Monday night at Elk hall with six tables in play. Prizes were won by Otto Zuehlke, William Rammer, and George Peerenboom.

theories of the origin of the earth, stressing such men as Kant, La Place and Chamberlain. He illustrated his talk with slides taken from actual photographic studies of the moon, planets and meteors.

Dr. Bagg explained that the earth will ultimately turn into a cold mass as it cools through the millions of future years. He also pointed out that the theory that the center of the earth is a molten mass has been disproven by the fact that the earth's resistance to attractions from other bodies in space shows the earth to be of solid matter.

In a study of the milky way, which he described as a birthplace of stars, Dr. Bagg declared that the digestion of bodies in the milky way is caused by a collision or near collision of these bodies with another one. Once thrown out of the path of the milky way, he declared that most of them disappear.

In his discussion of meteors, Dr. Bagg pointed out that there have been but two known instances of meteors causing fatalities, on the earth, which is proof, he continued, of the small importance of the earth and man in the universe.

Dr. Bagg's lecture next Monday afternoon will be on the subject, "The Earth's History as Revealed in the Rocks."

Colonial Styles

Prior to the Revolution, the Colonial styles prevalent in America were Queen Anne, Early Georgian, and Chippendale. During the Early days of the Republic, Sheraton and Adam styles found great favor here as they did in England. In France the chaste forms of the Louise XVI period exalted the classic revival.

Then came the ascendancy of Napoleon and with him a change in furniture designs. America turning away from everything of British favor, looked in gratitude to France and found the pompous French Empire styles. This resulted in what is known as the 'American Empire', which found its greatest exponent in the "Scottish" American designer Duncan Phyfe.

The Story of Sue

by MARGERY HALE
© 1931 BY NEA SERVICE, INC.

THE look on Thomas Andrews' face, as he entered the house of the family who had the desk with the secret drawer, was so assured, so smug, so calm and triumphant that Sue wanted to take her slender palm and strike him across his too-full lips.

"Would you mind explaining just why you spied on me?" Sue asked him. "I've told my reasons for wanting that paper—you see, it wasn't the one I wanted after all and I returned it this evening. Fortunately I did a service to a party who needed it." She nodded toward the woman. "She had been wanting that document and could not get it out of the desk. Now if you will explain..."

"I thought you were after something that didn't belong to you. It was my duty to inform the interested party."

"Oh, yes?" Sue's voice was sarcastic. One year before she would have been confused in such a situation. Now she didn't care. "You were spying on me, hoping that I'm an imitation, that I'm something from the Five and Ten that is trying to pass as real. You saw your chance to embarrass me and you took it. Then you pretended that you were befriending me. You're low, under-handed, yellow! Now go and fast!" Sue swung around and confronted the woman. "Have you a dog? Put him on that man. Hurry! Right away."

The woman was staring, amazed at Sue and at the play she was staging.

"We haven't a dog. I want to talk to this man. Why did you phone me?" She looked him squarely in the face. Then her expression changed. "Oh, now I know you. Your name is Andrews, isn't it? You're the man who came to my father looking for my kid brother one night. You wanted to buy him off so he would keep still about some kind of fake robbery he saw your sister-in-law bartering with the thieves and you heard of it. You couldn't bribe him, though. You're the man who thinks he can steal anything he wants. I'm glad to see you again. I think my brother has a few words to say to you. He is living with me now."

Thomas Andrews turned as though making for the door, but she stopped him.

A minute later the brother came down stairs.

"Let the fool go. He's soft. There's no fun in beating him up. You need more than a man with yellow blood when you want to fight. The boy opened the door and waited for Thomas Andrews to leave. But Sue held up a commanding hand.

"You say that he wanted to bribe you because you knew something about Lois Andrews' plot? That would sound nice when told to a judge. Suppose we hold him?"

To hold Thomas Andrews was the last thing Sue wanted to do. She was weary of courts and a police officer. But she wanted to frighten him into leaving her alone.

So many unpleasant things had happened that she no longer ran away from them. She stood her ground and met them.

Something was wrong with Jack. She had been in an accident with Jean Brady. She had been accused of stealing at the Andrews' party. She was acting as a receptionist and nurse for a dentist whose fiancée she had once posed. She had tried to help Jack and stolen the wrong will.

"Let's tell your story to the judge," she said again to Thomas Andrews with no intentions at all of doing it.

NEXT: A clue to Jack's case.

THE SAME GAME

FIRST MAID: My mistress is so curious.

SECOND: All mistresses are. How curious is yours?

FIRST: Well, yesterday I was looking through the keyhole into her room, and she was looking through the keyhole at me.—Answers.

MY NEIGHBOR Says —

Never cover bread immediately after it is baked. Allow it to cool slowly before putting it into the bread box.

Before inserting a screw in hard wood, draw the threaded part across a cake of white soap. The screw will then go in much more readily.

Woolen stockings do not shrink if washed carefully in tepid water and white soap suds. Rinse them in clear water, wring out and hang in the air to dry quickly.

Cut flowers will last much longer during the winter months if they are put into lukewarm water when they come from the florist.

WINE SHADES ARE NEWEST IN LIPSTICK

BY ALICIA HART

If the average girl were told she might choose one—and only one—cosmetic, foregoing all others, it's a safe bet she would cling to her lipstick.

Why? Well, for no reason at all except that red lips have within recent years become as conventional as knobs on doors or music in the bathtub. Miss Average Girl simply wouldn't feel comfortable unless her lips were painted.

Consider, therefore your lipstick. Do you know that the violent orange shades which have been so popular since sun-tan powders were first introduced are passe? You can buy them and should if your skin is still browned from a summer at the beach.

It is never to wear lipstick which has a suggestion of the wine shades. Lip coloring is still bright, so don't make the mistake of choosing a stick that is too dark. These new lipsticks have a way of making the face seem whiter, which is in accord with fall style precepts that young women are to look elegant and "lady-ish."

Claret colored lipstick tones in perfectly with the new red and purple shades that Paris designers are offering. They also harmonize with the greens and wood browns which are well up on fashion's calendar.

Of course if you change your lipstick you will need to change your rouge, because the coloring on your cheeks and lips must be the same tone.

"Lipstick ensembles" are being offered by several manufacturers this season. Instead of buying one lipstick for day wear and one for evening, you may have four, five or six, especially chosen to set off particular costumes. Charts have been prepared as guides in applying these different colorings. It is always well to remember that there is some danger in accepting such recommendations arbitrarily.

Unless you try out a shade you can't be sure it looks well on you. Experiment for yourself. It's the only safe rule.

WE WOMEN

By Virginia Vane

FAITHLESS LOVE MUST BE GIVEN FREEDOM—SHOW YOUR OWN PERSONALITY

Dear Miss Vane, For years I have loved the same boy, have helped him and stood by him although often he has been without work and unable to give me any pleasures of any sort. Now, the tide has turned and he is all right, has work and could marry me. But now he says he no longer loves me. He has always objected to my smoking and now says that if I loved him I would give it up for his sake. We have argued about this a great deal. He says that he will go away for a week or two, and that if within that time he finds he still cares, he will come back and marry me. What shall I do, Can I win his love? Shall I let him go?

SUNNY.

My poor Sunny, the signs are pretty plain but of course you don't want to read them, unless you absolutely have to. Unfortunately the young man is running pretty true to form. That is to say, he's behaving as hundreds of other selfish young males have behaved before and will continue to behave so long as women love them enduringly and not wisely.

While the gallant hero was struggling with adversity, you were his only help. He depended on you, and looked to you for all the love and sympathy he needed. He literally couldn't have got along without you in the hard days and so it never occurred to him to wonder whether he loved you quite as much as he said he did.

ONE OF THE GANG

"I'm Sam"

Penrod's best man. No wonder I'm always in trouble.

But success has brought a new attitude—a feeling of self-confidence and hope. He no longer needs you so desperately. He's beginning to wonder about this thing called love.

Has he really experienced the true emotion? Aren't there other girls in the world for him? Must he marry at once, just because he promised to when the world was against him and you were his only friend?

Thus he reasons, and in order to be as kind as possible he manufactures excuses for his behavior. The smoking alibi isn't a good one. He might have had these moral scruples about the habit a few years ago, if he were really so dead against nicotine.

No, he's looking for loop-holes and if you're a sensible girl, you'll give him his opportunity for escape. There's just a chance that he may find after he's gained his liberty, it doesn't have quite the jocular effect he expects. It is possible that being without you will seem less fun than he's imagined.

In any event you must let him make his decision freely—however much it hurts you. Better to know definitely the red truth, than to try to cling to these false promises of his and to find hope where there is no longer any hope. Tell him to go away not for one week or two but forever. Tell him that he must take his freedom and find out for himself what it feels like.

Don't give him the impression that you'll be always waiting in the background, a faithful little love who prays that he will return. Make yourself more of a personality than that. Show that you have dignity and pride of your own. Say that, after all these years, your honesty cannot be expected to hang around awaiting his decision.

If he doesn't love you enough to go through with the marriage as originally planned then it is better for you two not to see each other again until such time as he can no longer hurt you. Be firm about this. It's your only salvation—and it may be the one means of proving to him how necessary you are to his life.

MARY: Thinking about yourself is your chief trouble and the only way to cure that is to get plenty of outside interests and bury yourself in them. This constant study of yourself and worry about your effect on other people will lead you only to further self-consciousness and misery. Just for a change, start thinking deeply about something. ANYTHING outside your own personality. You'll find it brings you a new poise which you badly need.

WHITE HOUSE NAVAL AIDE DIES IN CRASH

Washington—(AP)—Lieut. Commander Hamilton Harlow, a junior naval aide on the White House staff, was killed Monday when his automobile turned over on the highway between Washington and Annapolis.

Commander Harlow was returning to Washington from a trip to the naval academy. The accident occurred at the intersection of the Crane and Defense highways about 15 miles from Annapolis.

Troubled With Eruptions on Face 4 Years. Healed by Cuticura.

"For four years I was troubled with sore eruptions on my face. The constant rubbing of the parts, due to itching, caused the eruptions to spread and develop into eczema. My face was a sight and caused me an endless amount of worry and embarrassment. The irritation caused me to lose many a night's sleep, and affected my health in general. I sent for free samples of Cuticura Soap and Ointment and right from the start got relief. I purchased more and in two months I was completely healed." (Signed) A. Plans Convention

Plans for the annual convention of the Wisconsin Chiropractic association here this week were formulated by Dr. J. A. Pannebeck, Appleton. Besides being assistant general chairman, he was on the program and publicity committees.

AIR LINER SAFER

Washington — American air lines flew more than 20,000,000 miles during the first six months of 1931 and suffered only five accidents, three involving deaths of passengers. There were nine passenger fatalities during this period, a decrease of 13 over the same period of 1930. Power plant and aircraft failures caused over 40 per cent of the accidents, it is reported.

BOOST STANDARDS OF CHIROPRACTIC IN RECENT YEARS

Course Required in Study of Sciences Outlined by Leaders

The twentieth annual Chiropractic convention of Wisconsin, which opens here tomorrow will, no doubt, devote some time to the subject of training the student who desires to enter this profession. A complete explanation of the training given to young people who enter the field of chiropractic has been set forth in an article released by the publicity committee of the Wisconsin chiropractors. They say:

"As in all established professions it has been the responsibility of chiropractors to create and maintain a high educational standard among practitioners of the science. They chose to eliminate the incompetent and commercialized type of school by making it impossible for its graduates to practice.

Its work has been to establish uniformly high licensing requirements in all states, to be enforced by chiropractic examining boards, and to secure the adoption, by all recognized schools, of curricula which conform to those requirements. The success of this work is revealed in the present curricula of the accepted chiropractic colleges, which encompass courses of at least three years of study and practical training, and in the close parallel between the graduating requirements of those schools and the li-

EXTEND WOMAN'S CLUB FINANCIAL CAMPAIGN

The Woman's club financial drive will be extended through this week, according to Mrs. E. V. Werner, president. The drive was scheduled to close at 7:30 last night, but since many of the workers were unable to report completely their total subscriptions, the drive was lengthened. Workers will continue with follow-up subscriptions and complete their card lists. Many of the larger contributions are still outstanding according to the committee workers.

A. O. Benz, national vice president of the Aid Association for Lutherans, will be the principal speaker at a booster meeting of Beaver Dam branches on Tuesday, Oct. 13. Louis Freude, also of this city, will attend the meeting as secretary of the Wisconsin Federation of the association.

The Definition of Chiropractic

CHIROPRACTIC is a Philosophy, Science and Art of things Natural; a system of adjusting the articulations of the spinal column, by hand only, for the correction of the cause of disease.

This definition is inclusive and any and all other methods are declared not to be Chiropractic.

All else belongs to other methods.
Patients and Chiropractors, who know Chiropractic as defined, confine their thoughts, actions and office work to it.

It's not, you would prefer the side splitting antics and departures of that comedy queen, Leila Koerber. What! You never heard of Leila! Why, she's the favorite actress with millions of screen fans.

3—Barbara Stanwyck decided that few young men's hearts would flutter if her real name of Ruby Stevens was billed in the bright lights.

4—Myrna Loy is just the right name for a wicked, wicked movie vamp, with oriental eyes, but her childhood playmates knew her as Myrna Williams.

5—Minnie Riggs is a good enough monicker, but everybody ought to be able to figure out why Evelyn Brent took her new name.

6—Greta Gustafsson was just like the names of a million other Swedish girls, so now this famous star is known as Greta Garbo.

7—Marie Dressler's name is known throughout the land, but few would recognize her real name of Leila Koerber.

INCOME HOLDS UP ON STOCKS DESPITE PRICE

Public in "Suspended Payment" State of Mind. Now, It Appears

BY CHARLES F. SPEARE Copyright, 1931, By Cons. Press Wall Street, New York—(CPA)—

Had an individual with a widely diversified portfolio of stocks and bonds left the United States in the midst of the buoyancy of markets at the end of June, retired to a region where communications were infrequent and inexact and then returned to New York on the first of October, the shock from reading the quotations of his favorite securities would doubtless have unsettled him.

For the fact would be presented to him upon receipt of his October dividend and interest checks from his banker, that while his capital had suffered a severe depreciation, there had been relatively little reduction in his average income. Questions had led him to believe that bond defaults and the passing of dividends were the rule and not the exception, for the one group seemed to be offered in the marketplace at receiver-ship prices and the other at figures which suggested a slump in earnings that prohibited further distributions of cash to shareholders. This, however, proved not to be the case.

Situation Inconsistent This may be a fanciful picture, but it illustrates one of the most inconsistent phases of the entire market situation. The public that owns investment securities is in a "suspended payment" state of mind. Whenever it gets this mental attitude it is certain that the end of the liquidation period is approaching. With such a psychological or emotional complex it will not accept as true facts the most outstanding and substantiated proof of solvency that a corporation can present to its bond and shareholders.

The infrequency of default in the past year of bonds listed on the New York stock-exchange is noteworthy. Most of the issues that have suspended payment are those of South American borrowers. Yet there are scores of American corporations whose mortgages whose current obligations would suggest to the man who has not looked at prices for three months that they must have ceased to pay interest. His first impression would have been that nearly 25 per cent of the railroad mileage of the United States had gone into receivership since early summer. Actually, there has not been a single mile added to the total since the record six months ago.

The same impression would have been gained from looking over the day's prices of numerous fixed interest obligations of manufacturing and distributing companies.

Fatalities Are Few Yet, here again the statistics have been so misleading at the quotations of German bonds and having heard of Germany's financial difficulties, the returning traveler would most certainly assume that all interest payments by Germany in dollars had been suspended, though subsequently he would find among his checks payments at regular rates. Oct. 1 of a momentary then due from Germany borrowers.

The most puzzling situation that would present itself to him would be the differences between the prices of his high grade public utility preferred stocks and the dividend rates which he was surprised to learn were still being paid. These shares he had regarded as the first line of his reserves because, in some instances, they were senior issues and were earning their dividend requirements so many times over that nothing short of abandonment by a large portion of the public of the ordinary consumer's

Two Hit Pitching By Burleigh Grimes Gives Cards 5-2 Victory

A'S DESPERATE OVER FAILURE AT THE PLATE

Mack to Send Rube Walberg or Earnshaw Against N. L. Champs

BY EDWARD J. NEIL
Associated Press Sports Writer
PHILADELPHIA — (AP) — For the first time in five years, the National League representative by the St. Louis Cardinals, held a world series advantage today over the champions of the American league.

In as many ways as the situation could be diagnosed, these surprising Red Birds of Missouri had the Philadelphia Athletics, world champions for two straight years, on the run. They lead in the series, two games to one, the first time a National league club has done that since the Cards of 1926 took two of the first three games from the New York Yankees and finally won the series four games to three. They have beaten Connie Mack's great pitching duo, Lefty Grove and George Earnshaw in successive games, they have a better batter of pitching strength, strategic position, psychology and greatest of all, winning impetus.

Macks Are Desperate
Today the veteran pilot, Connie Mack, seeking his third straight world championship and the fifth series title in a row for the American league, faced a situation that was truly desperate.

Against the charge of the Cardinals, rising with the power and savagery of their own Mississippi on a rampage, he had but one bulwark to throw up against them—“Big Jarge” Earnshaw. If the Red Birds can beat the great right-hander as they did in the second game, then there is not a baseball man in this hive of series excitement and commotion who will concede the A's the slightest chance of catching St. Louis in the final three games.

The ancient Mack, silent as ever, and showing more and more of his 68 years as he watches the breakdown of the machine the baseball world hailed as invincible, only a week ago, was faced too with the problem of making quick and drastic changes before it was all too late. Silent as ever, Mack had nothing to say of his pitching prospects for the fourth game today. It might be that he had decided to gamble all on Earnshaw. The critics thought he had. But there was also a basis to prediction that Rube Walberg, the regular pitcher, would replace Earnshaw through the past American league season, would try his luck against the clouting Cards today with Earnshaw held in reserve for a final do-or-die effort if it is necessary tomorrow.

May Yank Haas
There were also reports today that Connie had decided to replace regular centerfielder, Mule Haas, with Roger Cramer, a young substitute. The Mule, hampered by inactivity and a wrist that was injured late in the season has not been hitting. But if Connie were to yank the members of his club who had quit getting base-hits he would have to send nine substitutes against the Cardinals in the fourth game of the series here today.

Once again it was the same old story yesterday. Bewhiskered and vengeful, seeking to balance the scale for the two five hit defeats, plastered on him last year by the A's in the 1930 series, Burleigh Grimes, snarling his hatred, added another brilliant masterstroke to the three hit 2 to 0 shutout. Wild Bill Hallahan doled out to the champions in the second game of the opening pair of contests in St. Louis last Friday.

It was the opening game of three straight duels on the eastern front after a week-end cessation of activity, the stands were jammed to capacity, the day was magnificent for baseball, and even President Hoover, with Mrs. Hoover and a party of friends, were present in the flag-draped box beside the Athletics dugout.

As if the presence of the president, who in five games never had seen the Athletics defeated, were not enough to ensure victory, Connie Mack sent Lefty Grove, the long left hander with the tremendous speedball, an almost invincible pitcher in the past American league season, to pull his burning brands from the fire. And eight innings later a youngster named Leroy Mahaffey was doing Mack's twirling, Grove was all but in tears in his shower, and the A's were still feebly reaching for the offering of the blasphemous Grimes, one of the most courageous hurlers ever to tread a pitching peak.

Simmons Homers
They got to Burleigh for two hits, one of them Al Simmons towering home run with two out and one man on in the ninth inning, as the Cards belted Robert Moses for 11 hits and four runs before Mahaffey came in to win 5 to 2.

For seven innings the veteran whose hair is thinning on the top faked spitballs at the helpless A's and baffled them with his curve and control. Inning after inning he went along, backed by brilliant fielding when an occasional base on balls put them on base turning them back without a semblance of a hit, even a hard hit ball.

There were visions of a no-hit game and gradually the crowd of 33,000 that last year yelled for his heart's blood as he injected everything but fistfuls into his two bitter duels with the A's, swung to the side of the gallant warrior. They wanted a no-hit game, something never before accomplished in world series history, and by the time the eighth inning started they wanted it as badly as though Burleigh were pitching for the Athletics.

Chaff 'n Chatter

Al Capone, Grid Fan

CHICAGO and Wisconsin papers Sunday morning told the world that Al Capone, Chicago's No. 1 gangster and leading citizen attended the Northwestern-Nebraska game at Evanston — and they were right. But they also said Capone was booped from the stadium in the second half — and they were wrong.

With Lawrence college playing football in Milwaukee Friday night, we went down, saw the game and then rambled on to Chicago and watched Dick Hanley's Wildcats maul Nebraska Saturday afternoon. During the first quarter the Cats scampered hither and yon and scored three touchdowns, then they played under wraps and took things easy the rest of the way. As a matter of fact it looked as if they loafed.

Late in the second quarter someone whispered into our ears “There's Al Capone sitting down there” and we perked up and stretched a bit to gaze down five rows and a bit to the right and saw a gentleman in a purple suit and light colored, light felt hat. A slight turn of the head revealed a scar on the neck and one on the side of face. And when he turned so we could see his thick lips there was no doubt it was Capone.

The word traveled like wild fire through the particular section of the stands and when the half ended Capone and his body guard were the big point of interest as the folks below turned and looked up and those above stretched to gaze down and a few others ventured down the aisle. Soon word reached the 14 or more photographers lined along the grid and about five went into consultation and after picking out Capone started up the aisle, walked over in the photographers' line, smiled a bit and nodded and then proceeded to take “shots.”

The approach of the photographers was the signal for the entire Capone party with the exception of “Machine Gun” Jack McGurn to pull their hats down over their eyes and drop their heads. Finally Capone smiled and looked around and let the photographers' worst, but his body guard still covered up. Then ushers gave the photographers the “bun's rush” out of the aisles. But the spectators continued to gaze.

And while the gangsters tried to dodge the photographers they received a lot of help from people sitting around the party, young folks and even girls, who persisted in getting their features into camera range or putting their hands up near the lenses or in other ways harassing the newspaper men.

When “Go You Northwestern” was sung the Capone party acted like

But if Connie were to yank the members of his club who had quit getting base-hits he would have to send nine substitutes against the Cardinals in the fourth game of the series here today.

Once again it was the same old story yesterday. Bewhiskered and vengeful, seeking to balance the scale for the two five hit defeats, plastered on him last year by the A's in the 1930 series, Burleigh Grimes, snarling his hatred, added another brilliant masterstroke to the three hit 2 to 0 shutout. Wild Bill Hallahan doled out to the champions in the second game of the opening pair of contests in St. Louis last Friday.

It was the opening game of three straight duels on the eastern front after a week-end cessation of activity, the stands were jammed to capacity, the day was magnificent for baseball, and even President Hoover, with Mrs. Hoover and a party of friends, were present in the flag-draped box beside the Athletics dugout.

As if the presence of the president, who in five games never had seen the Athletics defeated, were not enough to ensure victory, Connie Mack sent Lefty Grove, the long left hander with the tremendous speedball, an almost invincible pitcher in the past American league season, to pull his burning brands from the fire. And eight innings later a youngster named Leroy Mahaffey was doing Mack's twirling, Grove was all but in tears in his shower, and the A's were still feebly reaching for the offering of the blasphemous Grimes, one of the most courageous hurlers ever to tread a pitching peak.

Simmons Homers
They got to Burleigh for two hits, one of them Al Simmons towering home run with two out and one man on in the ninth inning, as the Cards belted Robert Moses for 11 hits and four runs before Mahaffey came in to win 5 to 2.

For seven innings the veteran whose hair is thinning on the top faked spitballs at the helpless A's and baffled them with his curve and control. Inning after inning he went along, backed by brilliant fielding when an occasional base on balls put them on base turning them back without a semblance of a hit, even a hard hit ball.

There were visions of a no-hit game and gradually the crowd of 33,000 that last year yelled for his heart's blood as he injected everything but fistfuls into his two bitter duels with the A's, swung to the side of the gallant warrior. They wanted a no-hit game, something never before accomplished in world series history, and by the time the eighth inning started they wanted it as badly as though Burleigh were pitching for the Athletics.

REDWINGS CAN END LITTLE SERIES TODAY

Rochester, N. Y. — (AP) — The shortest “little world series” since 1923 was in prospect today as the Rochester Red Wings, champions of the International league, and St. Paul, American association pennant winners, prepared for the fifth game of the series.

The Red Wings needed only two more victories to clinch the series and their chances looked particularly bright in view of the tremendous batting punch they showed in winning three of the first four games in St. Paul.

Billy Southworth planned to send Carmen Hill, bespectacled veteran, to the mound for Rochester for the fifth game while Lefty Lefield of St. Paul wavered between young Johnny Murphy and Russell Van Atta.

BADGERS DRILLED FOR AUBURN GAME

Harvey Kranhold's Eligibility Still in Doubt Madison Reports

Madison — (AP) — An indication of who may compose the personnel of the first string line was given yesterday as Coach Glenn Thistlethwaite started the week's practice in preparation for the Badger's game against Auburn.

Ken Kruger, Madison, who played with the team that was sent against Bradley last Saturday was back with the first team yesterday at center. Ralph Lovshin replaced Mark Catlin at right end and Don Cuthbert, Barron, took Ward Stout's position at tackle.

George Thurner was at left end. Harvey Kranhold and Greg Kahet guards and Capt. Hal Smith at tackle. In the backfield Russ Rehholz and Walter McGuire were at halfback, Charles Goldenberg at quarter and John Schneller at fullback.

It was McGuire's first workout since he injured a shoulder two weeks ago. It was considered doubtful that he will be used against Auburn inasmuch as another injury might put him out of the running for the season. Kranhold was used throughout the practice although his eligibility is still questioned.

Series Notes

Philadelphia — (AP) — President Hoover made the only wild pitch of Monday's game. He tossed well beyond Mickey Cochrane's reach in officially opening the play.

Pepper Martin, Cardinal flash, continued his hitting streak with two hits, one a double, out of four times at bat.

Connie Mack said Martin is making the Cardinals tough. Martin said “I'm just lucky, I guess.”

Burleigh Grimes tossed 130 balls to win the game. Grove and Mahaffey threw 134. The assortment sent plateward by the Burleigh gent included 52 called balls, 30 called or missed strikes, six outfield flies, three infield flies, twelve grounders, 25 fouls and two hits.

Jimmy Foxx tried to duplicate his 1930 feat of parking one in the bleachers on the last ball thrown yesterday. After eight scoreless innings in 1930 Grimes saw the game broken up with Foxx's homer. Jimmie aimed at the bleachers yesterday but missed the ball.

DAVE MAIER K. O.'S PORTO RICAN BOXER

Milwaukee — (AP) — Dave Maier yesterday did what Frank Battaglia and Tait Littman have failed to do — knock out the Porto Rican black hurricane, Angel Clivelle.

Some 300 fans saw Clivelle go through a gymnasium workout with Maier. They were stunned to see Maier hit him a vicious blow on the head, and then see the Porto Rican middleweight go out cold. Maier admitted the potency of the blow undoubtedly was increased by a contraption he was wearing under his gloves to protect his hand.

Clivelle meets Frank O'Brien next Monday night in one of the top card bouts in the national elimination tournament to select a successor to the title vacated by Mickey Walker.

LEWIS AND ZBYSZKO MEET IN TITLE BOUT

Chicago — (AP) — The National Boxing association has sanctioned a wrestling match between Ed (Strangler) Lewis, and Wladek Zbyszko in Chicago Oct. 26, the winner to be recognized as heavyweight champion of the world.

The association's announcement says that Lewis will donate his share of the receipts to Governor Emmerson's unemployment relief fund, and will pay his own traveling and training expenses.

VIKING GOLFERS IN TOURNAMENT FRIDAY

Vike Gridders Work Hard; Orange Given Day Of Rest

APPLETON high school football team with a .500 average in the Valley conference race rested last night but today will resume training for the third league contest, Fond du Lac at Fond du Lac. The Orange was defeated last Saturday, 19 and 14 by West Green Bay high school. The week previous the boys won from East Green Bay while Fond du Lac has not been getting the “play” of other Valley conference grid teams the Cards appear to be stronger than in several years. All of which makes Coach Joseph Shields' job for Saturday just that much harder.

Up at George A. Whiting field of Lawrence college the Vikings, thoroughly rested from Friday night's contest with Marquette, were sent through a scrimmage session with the freshmen. The yearlings report but three times a week and Coach Percy Clapp likes to make the most of them when they are around.

Coach Clapp smiled a bit last night as he worked with his squad for the boys pleased him in their efforts

Friday. He admitted they did a lot of things wrong but they didn't hold that against them for they did their best, showed possibilities and after all, tomorrow's another day.

Caturday afternoon Clapp's team will be trotted out for the local fans and Lawrence students with Beloit and Marquette has picked the Blue and White to win the contest and the Vikings have no intention of throwing down the M. U. mentor.

Beloit last week showed a strong line in losing to Ripon 13 and 7. However, the Crimson took to the air late in the game and passed to victory over the gold. Beloit is known to have a pretty fair aggression this season and its defeat by Ripon should not be taken lightly — the Beloiters also have possibilities.

Only one Lawrence griddler was reported to be missing yesterday because of injuries. He is Charles Biolo, a backfield candidate who suffered an injured ankle. And when you have a squad of but 25 players lack of injuries means a lot.

Hurls Two Hit Game

BURLEIGH GRIMES

Two Hit Victory Makes Burleigh Grimes Feel The World Is All Right

But He's Puzzled Over Simon's Home Run Off That “Waste” Ball

BY GAYLE TALBOT
(Associated Press Sports Writer)
PHILADELPHIA — (AP) — He's just an old syndicate writer, this Burleigh Grimes, but if you stick around long enough and talk baseball he'll unburden himself, sure as the world.

Last night this latest world series hero, clean shaven and immensely pleased with the world in general, moved from chair to chair in the lobby of the Cardinals' hotel and accepted congratulations from hundreds of milling fans and baseball men. They thought right well of that two-hit game the veteran had pitched against the Athletics, and so, for that matter, did Grimes.

Telegrams were pouring in from every part of the country. They started coming in a few minutes after the last out had been made and they still were coming at intervals at a late hour. Grimes read each one with meticulous care and chuckled.

Syndicate Man
“I'll tell you, boys,” he said, when cornered by a bevy of correspondents, “I can't talk for publication. I'm giving my reactions to a syndicate, and it wouldn't be right. I've gotta play fair with my syndicate.” One may appreciate Mr. Grime's dilemma. It was a very delicate situation; a situation calling for tact.

“But, Mr. Grimes, it surely would be all right for you to tell us how you felt about losing a no-hit game when it was right in your grasp. After all, a no-hit game would have been mighty fine, especially in a world series. What was it Bing Miller, hit there in the eighth inning?”

The veteran, still clean shaven, pondered a moment. “Well, it was a fast ball, right smack down the middle. All he had to do was to stick out his bat and hit it. I could have hit it, myself.”

“Why did you give him a fat one like that, when it looked like you were going to come up with a no-hitter?”

“It was like this,” Grimes explained. “I didn't care so much about that part of it as I did about winning that ball game. We needed it. There already was a man on base and nobody out, I didn't want to take a chance on walking him. So, instead of feeding him a curve and trying to cut an outside corner, I put it straight down the middle, figuring maybe he would hit to one of my fielders. But he pumped it clearly into center field.”

Grimes had been a little more selfish of his own interests, might have gone down in the records as the first man in history to pitch a no-hit, no-run game in the world series. But he didn't take a chance. He made Miller hit.

Grimes Puzzled
Al Simmons' homerun in the ninth with McNair on base was an anticlimax. Grimes still was slightly puzzled about it.

“I figured we could get McNair trying to steal second, so I fed him a “waste” ball, high and outside. What did that guy do but reach out and slam it over the fence. You can't figure out a fellow like that. Any time a pitcher gets Al Simmons out he can say he's done something.”

Grimes was in high glee over the way he outguessed the two American league umpires on the field in yesterday's battle. The crowd didn't know what was going on several times when the ball was tossed about the park and Grimes refused to have anything to do with it until he received it from the right party. Once Umpire Stark, behind the plate, threw the pellet out to Burleigh and he neatly ducked, allowing it to roll on out to Frankie Frisch.

“It's this way,” explained the Cardinals star, “they've got a rule

SOX, CUBS SETTLE CITY SERIES TODAY

Chicago — (AP) — The sum of $7,421.62—the difference between the winners' and losers' pools in the Chicago baseball championship series—was the objective of the Cubs and White Sox in the final game today.

Captain Charlie Grimm of the Cubs, shoved the National leaguers back into the race for the title yesterday and just in time. In the ninth, with the Sox leading by 2 to 1, and two men on, Grimm rammed out a double to give the Cubs a 3 to 2 triumph and square the series at three victories each.

The other thrill of the game came in the second inning, when, after Vic Frazier, young Sox right-hander, had walked Guy Bush, Cub hurler, catcher Frank Grube attempted to slug umpire George Hildebrand, to emphasize his disapproval over the decision. Grube was restrained by Manager Donie Bush and Coach Mike Kelley, and was ordered from the field.

Tommy Thomas for the Sox and Pat Malone for the Cubs, were the pitching prospects.

EUROPE WAITS FOR MONEY TO START NEW WAR

Rotary Told European Youth Is Imbued With Militaristic Spirit

Special to Post-Crescent
New London—That countries of Central Europe would become involved in wars at any time if only they possessed sufficient financial backing, was the assertion of Dr. G. H. Williamson, of Newburg, speaking before the Rotary club at its luncheon Monday. Dr. Williamson, as a member of the American Hospital association, spent two months in central European capitals during the past summer. He went abroad to attend meetings of the association at Vienna.

Basing his remarks upon the fact that the youth of these countries are reminded to prepare for war in time of peace, Dr. Williamson said the spirit of militarism is depicted in the paintings, statues, draperies and works of art. The entire system of education, he pointed out, is given, with the militaristic idea in mind. This viewpoint, Dr. Williamson continued, breeds an attitude in direct contrast to that of America.

The speaker looked with distinct dismay upon the recent loan of money by American bankers and continued to point out the manner in which this money is being squandered by the governments to which it was loaned. This money, the speaker said, is being spent unwisely upon pretentious houses for workmen, on the erection of new hospitals while the older ones are lacking in repairs and equipment and on the erection and maintenance of brothels which cost millions. American money is being spent, Dr. Williamson emphasized in a drunken orgy.

School of Medicine at Marquette university, Milwaukee, in 1930 with degrees of doctor of medicine and bachelor of science in medicine.

A luxuriant growth of Sudan grass on a six-acre tract to be harvested by R. J. Hacker, route 1, Brillion, this week. It will be cut with a grain binder and in a green condition, packed into one of two silos on the farm, there having been only sufficient corn this year to partially fill one of them. Seeded on June 22, just before a heavy shower, the grass, in spite of subsequent drought, was ready for pasturing in about one month. When other pastures were burnt bare and brown, the Sudan grass was in a green, thriving condition. The grass has now headed out on stalks over two feet tall.

Among the first sugar beets to be harvested here this season were those at the Reuben Ott farm Saturday. A considerable acreage has been devoted to beets in this vicinity and it is estimated that rail shipments from here to the factory of the Menominee Sugar Co., will aggregate 50 or more carloads.

Recent rains have greatly benefited the crop. A sample beet from the Ott field is said to have tipped the scale at 9 pounds; another from the Edward Kreimann farm at 13 pounds. To facilitate loading of the crop on railroad cars, the sugar company has erected a beet loader here on a Milwaukee road siding. Shipments are to begin on Thursday.

Pupils at Longfellow school, district 4, town of Brillion, were dismissed Monday forenoon after two classes had been conducted, on account of the illness of the teacher, Miss Angela Domke. The school was closed Friday with the teacher attending an institute at Chilton.

The general shortage of cash may have been responsible for the sale of obsolete coin in a church offering here Sunday. Lack of a nickel may have prompted some donor to substitute a United States coin of 1855 of the half dime denomination. At first sight, the coin has the appearance of the standard dime of the present day, excepting that it is smaller and thinner. On one side, the words "half dime" are enclosed in a wreath design encircled by the motto "E PLURIBUS UNUM." The other side of the coin is a relief of a seated figure above the year 1855 with an over-head circle of 13 stars adorns the reverse. Though one or two old residents recall that the coin was in common use 40 or more years ago, the two oldest merchants of the village, whose businesses antedate the year 1885, say they do not remember having handled similar coins in common circulation.

LITTLE CHUTE GRIDDERS BOW TO FWD ELEVEN

Strong Clintonville Team Defeats Flying Dutchmen by 9 to 0 Score

(Special to Post-Crescent)
Clintonville—The FWD football team defeated the Flying Dutchmen of Little Chute on the Clintonville gridiron Sunday by a score of 9 to 0.

A touchdown was registered by the FWD squad in the beginning of the last quarter after the Flying Dutch Drive team had battered its way from its own 20-yard line to within a yard of the Flying Dutchmen's goal line as the whistle blew for the end of the third quarter. Clyde Bunker, right half booted a place kick for the extra point. With a few plays Bunker set the oval down one foot from Little Chute's goal line in a beautiful punt. McCaw blocked Little Chute's return punt for a safety bringing the FWD score, to nine. The Flying Dutchmen now seriously threatened the FWD goal although then advanced to within 20 yards of their objective twice during the game.

While the heat slowed up the game somewhat, both teams played consistent and conservative football until the last few minutes of play when the Flying Dutchmen opened their aerial attack in a desperate attempt to carry the ball down the field.

During the first half of the game both elevens hovered in the center of the field neither team getting the ball within 20 yards of the goal lines. The continual battering of Kruse, Daskam, and Orlebeke finally wore down the "Dutchmen" paving the way for the FWD team to break through the Little Chute lines for consistent gains in the last half of the game. The FWD line proved a stone wall for the Flying Dutchmen opening up holes for the plunging backfield and allowing the truck builders to score seven first downs. Little Chute made three first downs.

CULBERTSON on CONTRACT

by Ely Culbertson
World's Champion Player and Greatest Card Analyst

CAREFUL COUNTING AND CLEVER END PLAY

No matter how accurate the bidding, the bidding is not the end of the contract. If that were so, the game would soon lose the charm of infinite variety which holds its countless followers in a deathless grip and increases that army of followers every day. Bidding is mental play. It is a prediction of the number of tricks that can be made with the twenty-six cards held in the combined hands of the partnership. Sometimes the most expert play will not add a single trick to those that can be secured by even a novice. Fortunately, however, for the sustained interest in the game, this is rarely the case. Contract is not, as some people have said, a game of Aces and Kings. It is a game of accurately drawn inferences in the bidding and accurately reached conclusions in the play.

A Bridge lover in Melbourne, Australia, Mr. M. M. Phillips, sent me the other day a hand which demonstrated the fact that play in Australia can be just as accurate as in the most expert circles in America.

South dealt and bid one no-trump. North bid two spades and South with more than 40 honor-tricks raised the contract to three spades. South could have made game at notrump, but the menace of the poorly guarded clubs and hearts was such as to cause him to believe that game at spades was more probable.

East opened the diamond Queen and the hands of North and South were:

North: Spades K Q J 8 4
Hearts 6
Diamonds 10 5 2
Clubs K 10 8 5

South: Spades A 6 3
Hearts A 4 3
Diamonds A K 3
Clubs Q 6 3 2

North won the first diamond trick and played three rounds of trumps. Both followed to the first round and on the third round West discarded a diamond. North then led a club from his own hand and the Queen in dummy held the trick. West played the seven. Only one more club trick was required for game, but the fact that West had no more was revealed in the return of the suit and East held A J 9 over North's K 10 8 so that North's only chance was to force East to lead diamonds or clubs to him. East's original opening lead of the Queen of diamonds seemed to place J 9 in his hand, especially in view of West's diamond discard. Apparently East's remaining cards were: Clubs A J 9, Diamonds J 9 (at least) and two or three hearts. If he had only one heart, West would have held eight. East won the second round of clubs and led a heart which South won with the Ace. The remaining North and South cards now were:

North: Spades 8 4
Hearts —
Diamonds 10 2
Clubs —

South: Spades —
Hearts 4 3
Diamonds A 3
Clubs 6 3

North: Spades 8 4

Uses "Toy" Telescope To Find Comet Experts Missed

Brawley, Calif. (AP)—A lettuce and cantaloupe "ranch" foreman by day and an amateur astronomer by night, Masami Nagata will go down in astronomical history as the discoverer of the Nagata comet.

Mt. Wilson scientists recently received a telegram from Nagata, couched in terms of oriental deference.

After begging pardon for wasting their time, Nagata asked the observatory authorities if it was possible that he had located a new comet with his small telescope. He gave the position of the supposed new body in the constellation Leo.

Two days later he was informed by Mt. Wilson observers that their powerful telescopes had failed to locate the hazy conglomeration Nagata reported.

The same night Nagata, through his two-inch terrestrial telescope, again located it.

Dr. Seth B. Nicholson of Mt. Wilson observatory confirmed the discovery the next day. He described it as being in the constellation of Leo, not far from the star Rho Leonis and in the general direction of Mars, although about ten degrees to the right of that planet.

The importance of the find, he said, could not be determined until its orbit had been calculated. The observatory, however, usually finds three or four new comets yearly.

Nagata, born in Japan near Tokyo June 13, 1886, learned astronomy from his father, who taught the young man as much as possible with limited facilities. Nagata came to the United States in June, 1907, and for the last nine years has coupled his star-gazing with lettuce raising.

Ten years ago he purchased a two-inch terrestrial telescope and each night, after completing his daily labors, turned the magnified eyes skyward.

For a finder he utilized an ordinary navy six-power field glass. Now he intends to build a nine-inch reflecting telescope, using an 80 mm. reflector.

3 NEBRASKA DEATHS LAID TO POISON BOOZE

CABBAGE YIELD IN LATE FIELDS TO BE FAR UNDER NORMAL

Blame Drouth, Pests and Late Rains for Damage to Crops

BY W. F. WINSEY

Shiocton—The early cabbage crop of Outagamie-co, was almost a failure and the late crop is not much better. The early crop, however, averaged better than the late crop is expected to do. The late crop will average about one-fourth of a normal crop. The basis of this estimate is a survey of the fields, Saturday, and the estimates of dealers, officers of the Appleton Cabbage Growers' association, and a number of farmers. The farmers were hopeful for improvement in late cabbage.

The causes of light yields of both early and late cabbage are: the summer drouth, pests, and the late rains. The drouth is responsible for poor stands, small growth and swarms of hungry worms. The recent rains are responsible for the bursting of more than one-half of the early heads and for the late cabbage forming new heads above the tiny old heads. The drouth and the pests left the foliage of the late cabbage very light and riddled beyond repair. Despite all of the damage done, a good field of cabbage is in evidence here and there about the country.

Despite the short crop, a $4 price per ton for early cabbage and $8 per ton for late cabbage, there is very little demand thus far and very little activity in cabbage fields. The roads of cabbage factories and shipping stations. Up to this time only 35 cars of cabbage were shipped this fall from Center Valley as compared with 105 cars last fall at this time, according to a dealer. His estimate is 40 cars for October. This falling off in cabbage shipments this fall from former standards is perhaps typical for all stations.

THE COMPLETE HANDS WERE:

♠ K Q J 8 4

Thus, by accurate play North was enabled to make his contract. Less accurate play would have resulted in sure defeat.

TODAY'S POINTER

It must be borne in mind that the most radical and original feature of the Porcing Takeout is that the Jump does not necessarily show great length or strength in the bid suit, but merely game (or Slam) strength in the hand. Partner therefore must assume a minimum trump suit and support or deny accordingly.

Partner's (Opening bidder's) precise selection of a response will depend on the nature of his hand.

First: if able, show another biddable suit.

Second: rebid own trump suit if it is a strong five-card or a fair six-card suit.

Third: support partner's Jump suit bid if holding at least 3 2 or four small trumps. If holding more than the value of one Raise (after deducting the Opening bid values) jump the full amount of Raises.

Fourth: jump the notrump response if holding at least 2 1/2 honor-tricks.

Fifth: lacking any trick values other than those already shown in the Opening bid, respond with the required number of notrumps. This constitutes a minimum response denying additional support and merely repeating the Opening bid.

Mr. Culbertson will be glad to answer questions on bidding and play of hands sent in by readers. Address him in care of this newspaper. ENCLOSE A TWO-CENT STAMPED, SELF-ADDRESSED ENVELOPE.

Your Birthday

WHAT TOMORROW MEANS TO YOU "LIBRA"

If October 7th is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10:35 a. m. to noon, 3:15 p. m. to 5:45 p. m., and from 9:10 p. m. to 11 p. m. The danger hours are from 7:30 a. m. to 9:40 a. m., and from 6:05 p. m. to 8:20 p. m.

More conspicuous for domestic changes and events than changes in the business or professional sphere, October 7th promises, astrologically, much in the way of achievement along steady and progressive lines. The benefits, although postponed in productivity, will be more the less sure and abiding. Marriage celebrated on this date will be crowded with success.

Children born on this October 7th will be tactful, ingenious and clever. They will be "romancers," especially where their individual activities are concerned. Events, in which they have taken part, will be exaggerated. Whilst no outstanding success is foretold, they will not be failures. Their natures will be optimistic and cheerful.

You, if born on October 7th, would rather be a big frog in a little pond, than a little frog in a big pond. Unless you are the hub of things—no matter how trivial they may be—you feel down-hearted and dispirited. You, of course, would like to be a big frog in a big pond but very wisely realize that this is beyond your limitations. You are more the small village, than the large city, type, and will act wisely if you will keep within your own natural confines.

You are not equipped for a prolonged and stiff struggle. You may eventuate as a fairly good amateur but you will never become a professional. You are shrewd, fairly intelligent, honest, and industrious. You are a "sticker," and not disposed to grasp opportunity, unless it is handed to you on a silver platter. You are also a "stickler," and enthusiastically subscribe to orthodoxy and convention. You are imitative, but never original.

If a woman, it will be rather hard for you, at any time, to break the fetters of "Main Street." You should make an effort, however, to rise superior to the impulse to gossip, and to remain silent when speech would hurt. Both October 7th men and women are destined to marry early, and their lives will be full of little happenings and much monotony.

Successful People Born on October 7th:

 2. Bronson Howard, dramatist.
 3. Kate J. Bateman, actress.

FARMERS MAKE HAY WHILE "SUN SHINES"

BY W. F. WINSEY

Center Valley—Farmers here Saturday were making the best of an ideal hay day for curing and hauling in alfalfa seed, alfalfa hay and soybean hay. A number of other farmers were husking corn in their fields, or doing their fall plowing.

William Timm was one of farmers busy with his crop of alfalfa seed. He had cured the crop in cocks and was hauling it to his barn. The cocks were large and thick in the fields and the heads are well filled with seed of a good quality.

Elmer Schroeder had cured his crop of soybeans and was putting it in small cocks preparatory to storing it in his barn. The present is Mr. Schroeder's first experience with raising soybeans for hay. After comparing the feeding value of soybeans with other hay, Mr. Schroeder will probably increase his acreage next year.

LEISGANG FARM IS OUTSTANDING IN TOWN OF SEYMOUR

Luxuriant Stands of Alfalfa Cover Many Acres of Fields

BY W. F. WINSEY

Seymour—For its fine group of well kept buildings, thrifty fields of alfalfa and other evidences of successful farming, the farm of Frank Leisgang, route 3, is one of the outstanding farms of the town of Seymour.

At the present time, a number of Mr. Leisgang's fields are covered with luxuriant stands of alfalfa. He has an excellent herd of dairy cattle. He shifts his cattle from one field to another to give them the largest possible amount of pasture with a minimum of travel and to prevent the cattle from cropping the alfalfa at this late date, so short the stand might winterkill. He has 28 acres in three such fields. He exceeds 10 acres or more to alfalfa each spring and plows under an old stand as green manure for a crop of corn. His rotation is alfalfa hay, alfalfa pasture, corn, grain and alfalfa.

After giving the fields a coating of barnyard manure, he plants 30 acres of corn each year. He often top dresses an old stand of alfalfa in the fall if it needs the fertilizer to pass through the winter. With his soil treated in this way, he raised enough corn to fill two large silos this fall and had some of his corn left to husk. He threshed 700 bushels of grain but said that amount was only one-half of his regular grain crop. His mows are filled with 40 tons of alfalfa hay, and 20 tons of timothy. His old meadows were poor this year but his alfalfa helped him out.

In the flush of the season, his 30 cows on alfalfa pasture produced 1,200 pounds of milk daily, and are now producing 695 pounds. Beside fine buildings and alfalfa fields, his flower garden is a great attraction.

In attempts to obtain shares of the fortune.

Mrs. Helen Redlinger, Milwaukee, daughter of John H. Wendell, quarry worker here, said she had been in correspondence with relatives in Germany, claims her father is a great great grandson of Gottlieb Matthias Wendell, founder of the fortune.

Other Wisconsin citizens claiming to be related to the New York Wendells are: Matthew Wendell, grocer; Stephen Wendell, a waiter; and Mrs. Elizabeth Schoenkeel, daughter of John H. Wendell, all of Milwaukee.

LA FOLLETTE EXPECTS U. S. AID TO JOBLESS

Chicago (AP)—Senator Robert M. La Follette of Wisconsin, was confident, he said Sunday, that congress would make some provision for federal unemployment relief at its next session.

"Opposition to the federal relief," he said, "on the grounds that it constitutes the dole does not alter the situation. The fact is that millions, willing to work, can not find jobs. County and municipal treasuries are now carrying more of a load than they can bear."

KEEPS WATER FROM GAS

Washington—The U. S. Army Air Corps has adopted a new device to separate water from gasoline and oil in airplane engines. The device known as a "segregator," works on the natural tendency of these fluids to separate due to the difference in their specific gravity. It was invented by an Air Corps sergeant and is not to be offered commercially.

SAM

BY FREEMAN LINCOLN

Chapter 29
THE STRANGER
 Freddy Munson sighed and leaned back in his chair. "You are trying to say, I suppose, that you and I were almost man and wife. That was it, wasn't it?"
 Sam nodded, her eyes drooping. "Yes."
 "Well, I admit the charge. I'll also admit that 'almost' is as far as we got." He continued to smile. "That being the case, I can't see any use in talking about it any more."
 "But we must! I must explain!" "Look here, Sam, let me talk for a minute, will you?" Freddy, suddenly serious, leaned across the table and tapped on its surface for emphasis. "It seems to me that if you and I let ourselves go, we'll find ourselves involved in about five seconds in the midst of a high-grade emotional scene."
 "I know, but—" "It's no use," Freddy said, stubbornly. "I won't have a scene." Sam made a baffled gesture. "Do you mean to tell me," she inquired in slow wonder, "that you and I are going to part like this? Aren't we going to say any of the things that must be said, because you are afraid of a scene?" "I'm not afraid of a scene," He shook his head gently. "I simply dislike a scene when there is no use for one. I asked you to have lunch with me today for one good reason. I wanted to find out something, and I've found it out."
 Sam said pleadingly: "Aren't you going to let me explain at all, Freddy? Aren't you going to let me try to justify myself?" "What's the use? You want to explain to me what happened that night when you and I almost took the six o'clock train for New York. You want to tell me why you thought what you thought, and why you did what you did. You want to tell me what you've been thinking, and doing, and feeling ever since. Am I right, Sam?" "Yes, Freddy. Don't you think you might be kind enough to listen?" "I doubt if my listening would be a kindness. It would just involve us in a hopeless tangle of explanations and reproaches. It wouldn't do any good." He shook his head. "It isn't, you know, as though you had to justify yourself to me. It isn't that I'm trying to be rude either. It's just that I'm trying to avoid a painful narration of causes, when causes aren't important. Causes aren't important to me, Sam. Only facts are important." "I see," she said. "There's no possible way, Freddy, in which I can persuade you to let me have my say."
 He frowned. "There might be one way, but you wouldn't take advantage of it."
 "Wouldn't I? You might at least give me the chance."
 "All right, I will." He leaned forward and looked her in the eyes. "You can have your say, Sam, but only if you can tell me that I'm wrong in two conclusions that I've drawn today. If you can 'yes' to two simple questions that I'll ask you, you can talk your head off. Otherwise talk is foolish and a waste of time. Shall I ask the questions?"
 Sam felt a clutch of fear at her heart but she managed to nod. "Go ahead and ask them."
 "All right, I will. Here's the first one." He spoke briskly, almost casually. "Can you honestly tell me, Sam, that you're not in love with Peak Abbott?"
 Sam said nothing. She merely stared.
 "That's the first question. Here's the second." He nodded impersonally. "Can you tell me with equal honesty that you are in love with me?"
 Sam continued to stare, her eyes widening. Freddy's face was a white blur. There was a lump in her throat. She tried to think, but her brain seemed paralyzed. She tried to speak, but the words would not come. A power stranger than she herself held her speechless.
 After an interval Freddy smiled and leaned back in his chair. "You see?" he inquired gently. "Do you see now, Sam, why I said that talk was useless, and why I tried to avoid it? I wasn't blaming you for what has happened. It isn't your fault. It just has happened, that's all. I knew that no amount of talk could change it."
 There was suddenly a stranger across the table from Sam. He had the face and the figure of someone she knew—of someone named Freddy Munson—but he was a stranger, nevertheless. He was looking at his wrist watch and shaking his head. "Darn it all," the stranger was saying ruefully. "I might have known! I've missed my train. Now I'll have to wait an hour for another."
 At twenty minutes to five that same afternoon Sam was walking up and down a deserted platform at the railway station. She was waiting for the train from New York on which Peak Abbott was returning from his trip to see Fourth. A telegram giving the hour of Peak's arrival had been waiting when she came back to the stable after her luncheon with Freddy Munson. Peak's telegram had said something about everything being all right. She supposed that meant that he had seen Fourth, and that he had found out where Martha was.
 It really mattered that she see Peak at once and tell him about Freddy Munson. Peak would be surprised when he heard. He might well be angry and tell her that he was through with her forever. She would not blame him if he did.
 There was a long whistle behind her, and Sam turned to see the New York train slide around a gentle curve and come to a stop beside the raised platform. Sam caught a glimpse of Peak after the distance. She called his name and ran toward him, waving her hand.
 Peak was surprised to see her. He was also tremendously pleased, although he tried not to show it. "You shouldn't have bothered with me," he said.
 "I wanted to come." They walked down the stairs to the street. "I wanted to talk to you."
 "Naturally," Peak thought that she wanted to talk to him about Martha.
 They found Sam's car and Peak took the wheel. "Well, young lady," he said cheerfully, "you aren't such a bad detective."
 "Oh, you mean about Martha." Sam stirred impatiently. "So Fourth knew all about it did he? I thought he would. Have you told Nelson?"
 "I sent him a wire saying I had good news, and to meet me at my house at five-fifteen. Do you mind if we stop there first?"
 "Of course not. Where is Martha?"
 "She's all right." Peak laughed. "As a matter of fact, she's living in comparative luxury in a small hotel about thirty miles out in the country. Your stepfather is doing her fairly well."
 "Where is she coming home?" "I imagine the best plan will be to send Sonny up there on a surprise visit. Perhaps he can bring her home tonight."
 "Good," Sam nodded. "And that will be the end of that. Now we don't have to talk about it any more. I want to hear all about it, but I'd rather hear later, if you don't mind. Just now I'd like to talk about something else."
 "Oh!" Once more Peak glanced at her curiously. "All right. What's on your mind?"
 Sam was silent for a moment. Then she said quietly: "I had luncheon with Freddy Munson today, Peak."
 "Oh." The monosyllable was the only sign that Peak had heard. It seemed to escape his lips involuntarily.
 Sam waited for a time for a comment that did not come. Then she pressed the subject doggedly. "You remember my asking you last night if I could have lunch with him? You must, because you laughed about it. You even said that you remembered him as a reporter on your news paper."
 "I remember perfectly," Peak's tone was expressionless. "Is it Freddy Munson you want to talk about, Sam?"

 Peak braces himself for a painful interview, tomorrow. "For better or for worse," he says grimly.

TRADE STATUS IN S. AMERICA TO BE STUDIED

Fourth Pan-American Commercial Conference Opens in Washington

BY DAVID LAWRENCE
Copyright, 1931 by Post Pub. Co.
Washington — (CFA)—While the eyes of the American people have been focussed on Europe for the last several months, there has been a feeling here that the United States ought to be studying closely the economic situation of Latin America. Today the 21 republics through accredited delegates are participating in the fourth Pan-American commercial conference here. Each conference in the past has added to the opportunities for closer economic understanding, but this occasion transcends all others, for the 500 delegates are meeting at a time when the whole world situation is disturbed and when the debts of South America to investors in the United States have to some extent required a default.

There has been an undercurrent of criticism of some of these loans on the ground that American investment bankers have induced various governments to borrow money that was really not needed and have participated in an era of extravagance which is now bringing a crushing tax burden. Some of these loans are secured by customs and tax receipts in such a way that changes in internal revenue systems are not possible without the consent of foreign bondholders committees, a phase of inter-American affairs that does not make the United States particularly popular in Latin America.

Hint Moratorium
Here and there have been hints of a moratorium on South American loans, but the situation is not parallel to that of Germany or France because obligations have been government repatriations to other governments. In South America the governments borrowed from private investors in the United States, so a default or moratorium is a serious blow to the permanent credit of the borrowing country.

Arrangements to refund, South American loans at better terms of interest are likely to be made in the next few years but at present with the loss of the banks of this country concentrated on transactions within the United States and in short term paper in Europe, the chances of South America getting favorable attention are by no means favorable.

A year of revolutions in almost every South American country has also served to weaken the investor's confidence in the American republics, so the conference here this week, the date for which was set a long time ago, comes by coincidence at a moment when much may be done to show the American investor the nature and character of South American economic leadership.

There's another viewpoint from which the conference has an important bearing on economic developments in the United States. For the last seven years the United States has been making steady increases in export trade, but in one year three quarters of the gain has been wiped out by the depression. Likewise the United States has bought much less goods from South America.

The market to the south is considered a natural outlet for the goods of the United States, but the tendency in the financial centers of the United States has been to look to Europe for large financial operations and the furnishing of credit. The hope is that American capital now will see that the South American market is a profitable one for financial and trade cooperation and that will be the emphasis of all official utterances this week.

MUST SECURE CAR PERMITS BY FEB. 1

Legislature May Change Law, However, at Special Session

Under the present state laws, all automobile licenses must be secured in 1932 on or before Feb. 1. This is in comparison with this year's provision which extended the time of payment to March 15, 1931, because of the depression. Next year, instead of having six weeks of grace car owners will have six weeks less than the regular period to secure their permits. In other words, all automobile licenses, according to present provisions, must be secured by Feb. 1, three months earlier than it was necessary to secure them this year.

There is a possibility that the time for paying auto licenses will be extended by the special session of the legislature this month but the depends on the wording of the call to be issued by the governor.

Should Governor La Follette leave the call for unemployment relief broad enough to admit them, the special session will have bills on extending auto license payments as well as other similar plans. It has been suggested that there may even be an attempt to bring in semi-annual payment of taxes as an unemployment relief plan.

FLASHES OF LIFE

Toronto—Stout men playing leap frog, greybeards picking up beads on the end of a soda straw, some 600 normally dignified gentlemen racing, yelling and playing like six years olds. They were delegates to the Recreation Congress of the United States and Canada who had been told adults should play.

Auckland, New Zealand — The government and the breweries are losing money in excise taxes and trade. Home brew has become an increasingly strong competitor with the commercial product.

TRANSFER RAILROAD CLERK TO MARINETTE

Several Appleton real estate men expect to attend the annual meeting of the Wisconsin Association of Real Estate Brokers at Hotel Schroeder in Milwaukee, Oct. 14 and 15. Among the topics to be discussed are appraisals, real estate sales and business management. Each of the four half-day sessions will be devoted to one of the subjects. The annual banquet will be held Wednesday evening. Harry Kissell, president of the National Association, is expected to speak.

Who's News Today

BY LEMUEL F. PARTON
(Copyright, 1931, by Cons. Press)
New York — (CFA) — The Pan-American conference, convening at Washington Monday summons America's leading practitioner in money ills to prescribe for sick pounds and pence. This expert, Dr. Edwin W. Kemmerer, professor of economics and finance at Princeton university, has in the last 23 years given emergency treatment to the currency of 11 nations—Egypt, the Straits settlement, Mexico, Guatemala, Colombia, South Africa, Chile, Poland, Ecuador, Bolivia and China.

Handsome, gray-haired, distinguished Dr. Kemmerer won the Latin Americans not only because he understood money but because he was a good dancer. In Chile, some statesmen were offish about an outsider expiring their currency, but observing Dr. Kemmerer's grace and agility in the fox trot, they succumbed, and his fame spread through all tangoed.

However, Dr. Kemmerer hates jazz money as much as he loves syncopated rhythms. One of the country's implacable foes of soft money, his speech at the conference will not touch on the free silver heresy which is percolating world money discussions just now.

Seizing his little black statistics bag and answering a mid-night call from some far nation, "Doc" Kemmerer's prescription is always good. Routinely passing through Wesleyan and Cornell, he taught economics at Purdue and went to the Philippines in 1903 as traffic financial adviser. The rest was easy. He responds happily on a mountain of degrees, earned and honorary, theses, treatises and books of his own devising, awards, honors and distinctions, as the master of knowledge possibly somewhat more recalcitrant than that cornered by Albert Einstein.

Once there was a Brooklyn newspaper reporter, an American, who became a portly and distinguished cleric with an English accent. So runs today's tale of New York's thousand and one nights. The Rev. Dr. Randolph Ray, pastor of the Little Church around the Corner, urges the repeal of the prohibition laws to make jobs and prosperity. He came to New York from a southern college, toyed with medicine, studied law at Columbia, did "leg work" for the Brooklyn Eagle, wrote thrillers for the Munsey magazines, and then patiently plugged his way into the Episcopal ministry.

Evangeline Adams, the astrologer, predicted that he would go west, that he would not like it and would return to a distinguished career. He became chaplain of a Bryan, Texas, agricultural college, was dissatisfied, returned and eventually became the tolerant, human and tactful rector of the Little Church, made famous in 1870 when it accommodated Joseph Jefferson in the last rites of a great actor which the pretentious church had refused. He has remained a friend of Miss Adams ever since, consults her, and says he sees no reason why the stars should not light up human destinies.

He is both a scholar and an epicure and enjoys the warm and intimate friendship of such celebrities as Otis Skinner, George Arliss, Minnie Maddern Fiske, E. H. Sothern, George Arliss and Daniel Frohman. He is by no means a straight-laced person, but he does wear a rubber corset to keep his weight down. He laughingly says he took on the English accent because he thought it belonged in the church of England.

Juan Esteban Montero is president of Chile today in spite of his wife. She insisted that he ought to keep out of politics and take care of his four children, but he was nominated and elected anyway.

Senor Montero was a radical, later made conservative by responsibility. Becoming minister of the interior in the Ibáñez cabinet, he swung to the right, far from his old position of the radical wing of the liberal party. He became acting president with the overthrow of Ibáñez last July. He was professor of law at the University of Chile and the ministry of the interior was first political office. He is known as one of the most cultured and brilliant men in Chile, with a strong popular following, but still looked upon doubtfully by the militaristic caste. He is an advocate of "sound money" and has made penetrating studies of finance.

The Truth About Rheumatism

The truth is that within 24 hours after you start taking the efficient prescription called Allenru uric acid poison starts to leave your body. Within 48 hours pain, agony, and distress are gone — you're happy again — and back on the job. You're simply fooling yourself when you stick to makeshift pain deadeners and relievers — unless uric acid goes — rheumatism stays with you. Allenru is positively guaranteed by Schilz Bros. Co., Night's Drug Store and druggists everywhere. It does just as this notice states or money back — a generous bottle for 55 cents. Adv.

LIFE'S ODDITIES By George Clark

"Your ideas are old-fashioned, mother. Girls, nowadays, want to think of something besides business and money."

Women Are Stauncheest Supporters Of Gandhi

BY MILTON BRONNER

London—If Mahatma Gandhi, unrivaled leader of the Indian people, remains for the whole of the second Indian Round Table Conference to decide on the future government of India, will he exert the same magnetic influence on the women of England that he has had in India? This is a question that serious Englishmen are asking themselves. It seems odd to speak of Gandhi as a magnet for women. For he is the very extreme antithesis of all that men ordinarily consider magnetic for the other sex. He is not tall or young or handsome or romantic-looking.

Instead, he is 52, a wispy of a brown man, a mere wraith in which the pulse of life nevertheless beats ardently for great causes. He is almost skin and bones, due to his ascetic practices and his strict observance of a fast day and a silence day each week. His face is the kind that would ordinarily repel most women—a bigish nose topped with big glasses, hollow cheeks, a mouth which displays itself almost toothless when it opens to smile. His voice is not particularly pleasant. He does not go out of his way to pay pretty compliments, which might appeal to others.

Magnet For Women
Nevertheless that he is a magnet for the other sex is a fact beyond dispute. For the women of his own land and his own blood and color there has been nothing like him in modern times. The women flock to his meetings. They make pilgrimages to his home and leave their pathetic gifts of flowers and fruits bought out of their poverty. It was they who carried his cult of passive resistance to the British Raj to its ultimate perfection. It was the women who demonstrated more than the men. It was they who furnished most of the pickets. It was they who accompanied him on his famous march to the sea when he started his attack on the salt tax.

How does he do it? The answer is, in part by his mysticism and his spirituality. The Hindus are a very old people and there are certain qualities that appeal to them more deeply than they do to the more materialistic westerner.

But that is not the whole story. He has seized the hearts of his brown sisters because he has made himself their bold, out-spoken champion.

Over and over again in public meetings he has expressed his absolute view that men and women are equal. He practices what he preaches. In his Ashram, or settlement at, Saharmati, women have equal rights with the men. They vote on all important matters just as do the men. No child marriages are allowed. In the school he maintains boys and girls are brought together in the class like brothers and sisters.

He is opposed to the system of purdah—seclusion of the women in a fixed part of the house, with all that entails of ignorance and isolation. He has declared that men must cultivate a far greater respect than they have for women.

Gandhi's Principles
He has said finely: "All of us men must hang our heads in shame so long as there is a single woman whom we dedicate to our passions."

And again: "Of all the evils for which man has made himself responsible, none is so degrading, so shocking, or so brutal as his abuse of the better half of humanity; to me—the female sex—not the weaker sex, for it is the nobler of the two. It is, even today, the embodiment of sacrifice, silent suffering, humility, faith, and knowledge. A woman's intuition has often proved truer than man's arrogant assumption of superior knowledge."

Converts Follow
Some of this doctrine appeals to the mass of Indian women. All of it appeals to the finer spirits like Sarojini Naidu, the famous Indian poetess whose verses are the finest a Hindu ever wrote in English.

And this same tug of the little brown magnet that is Gandhi has proved irresistible to white women too. There is Mira Bai, for instance, her real name is Madeleine Slade daughter of the late Admiral Sir Edmund Slade. Six years ago she left England and a life of ease, luxury and society to become one of Gandhi's most devoted disciples. She is one of his secretaries. She works with her hands. She lives in the simplest of rooms and eats the plainest of food. Hear her: "My attraction to the Mahatma is entirely religious. He is the symbol of religion to me. Gandhi's message to humanity proved irresistible. The modern world is far too materialistic. It needs mysticism. Gandhi is a practical mystic."

So she is here in England to serve him as she serves him in India. And only lately the wires announced that Miss Slade was to have a companion in service, an American girl, Miss Nilla Cram Cooke, daughter of the late George Cram Cook, poet and playwright. Across the world she felt the tug of attraction by the little brown magnet. She desired to follow in his path of renunciation of the material things of this world.

And while Gandhi lives in Kings-

START ERECTING LANNON STONE ON CHURCH BUILDING

Plan to Lay Cornerstone of First English Lutheran Church Oct. 18

With most of the preliminary work for the main floor completed, including the first concrete slab, workmen of the Ford Construction Co. Monday started laying white Lannon stone for the walls of the new First English Lutheran church at the intersection of E. North and N. Drew-sts. Roy O. Papenthien, Milwaukee architect, is supervising construction.

Plans are being formulated for special services at 2:30 Sunday afternoon, Oct. 18, when the cornerstone of the new building will be laid. The stone is to be of red Wausau granite, 48 inches long and 28 inches wide. It will weigh approximately one and one half tons.

It is expected the stone walls will be completed in approximately eight weeks. Steel work for the roof structure is expected to arrive next week, after which construction work on the roof will get underway to get the building under cover before cold weather sets in.

Preliminary work in the basement also has been completed, including the sub-auditorium, choir room, kitchen, and other rooms. A vault also is being constructed in the basement for storage of church records.

Construction on the new parsonage in the rear of the new church also is underway. The floor has been completed and carpenters are erecting studding and second floor joists.

The old parsonage, which stands in the rear of the church, will be used as the church school. One large room will be used for general assembly of church school students. After the assembly the pupils will attend classes in the various other rooms.

The new parsonage will have a large living room, dining room, kitchen, bath and four bedrooms. It also will be constructed of Lannon stone to harmonize with the church. The parsonage and Sunday school building face N. Ida-st.

ley Hall, a settlement house in the crowded east end of London, he will have serving him two white girls from the North American continent—Miss Mildred Osterhout of Vancouver, British Columbia, and Miss Camille Annette Solomon of New York City. They did not come over for that purpose. In fact, they came before it was even dreamed that Gandhi would come to London after all.

But they are thrilled to death about the assignment. Miss Osterhout will prepare such food as Gandhi eats and Miss Solomon will serve it to him.

The two girls who are to have this unique experience both came to Kingsley Hall to engage in social settlement work. Miss Osterhout used to teach school in Vancouver. Miss Solomon engaged in settlement work in New York.

President Hoover: "His loyal and generous character as a neighbor and a friend, his public spirit as a citizen, his services during the war, his accomplishments as ambassador to Mexico, his unique contribution to the success of the London naval conference—all are the record of that sort of an American who makes our country great."

Prime Minister MacDonald: "I am greatly grieved by the loss of one whom I have long regarded as a most delightful person and a much valued friend."

Governor Roosevelt: "It is a misfortune for the state of New Jersey and for the United States senate the life of Mr. Morrow has come to an end at the height of its usefulness."

Dr. James Rowland Angell, president of Yale university: "He brought into our public life personal and political qualities all too rare."

Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia university: "He was outstanding for intelligence, far-mindedness and courage."

Alfred E. Smith: "The death of Dwight W. Morrow comes as a great shock. It is a distinct loss to the country and the passing of a strong and vigorous character from American public life."

Felix Warburg: "He leaves a wonderful record in the many-sided selfless efforts he furthered."

Major Henry M. Curran, president of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment: "A useful and beautiful life. He was one of our great Americans."

Governor Larson of New Jersey: "His loss will be felt by the nation at large and other countries of the world and particularly by the people of New Jersey who were regarded so fortunate in having secured him for their representative."

Former Senator David Baird of New Jersey: "Dwight W. Morrow had an interest in his fellow man which motivated his great life in such a way that every one of us was greatly benefited."

Rome C. Stephenson, president of the American Bankers' association: "Senator Morrow was one of the great bankers of America. Through his unselfish devotion the ideals of his country he made a valuable contribution to our standing and prestige throughout the world."

J. P. Morgan, when advised of Mr. Morrow's death at his country home at Alderman, Hertfordshire, made no comment.

MEXICO CITY
Mexico City—(AP)—Mexico mourned Dwight W. Morrow today as a diplomat, a student of human nature and above all as a friend.

The news of his death brought expressions of regret from Mexicans in all walks of life. The embassy was visited by a steady line of persons coming to present their condolences. Telephone calls and telegrams of condolence poured in from the city and other parts of the country.

Highly esteemed for his ability, sincerity and rare understanding of Mexicans and their problems, demonstrated during his term as American ambassador, Mr. Morrow was unanimously referred to as one of Mexico's greatest friends.

The senate held a special session to draw up a note of regret to the American senate. General Plutarco E. Calles, whose friendship with the late senator was one of the features of Mr. Morrow's three years in Mexico, telephoned the embassy from his ranch near Monterrey.

"Mexico has lost a very good friend and the United States has lost a great man," the general said. The senate referred to him as "the man who comprehended the Mexican people."

President Ortiz Rubio and Mrs. Ortiz Rubio wired their regrets and sympathy to Mrs. Morrow.

STOCKS SCORE NEW RALLIES IN HEAVY BUYING

Prominent Issues Score
from Two to 16 Point
Advances

BY CLAUDE A. JAGGER
Associated Press Financial Editor
New York.—(P)—The stock market came out of the dumps with a rush today, as feverish buying and short covering was inspired by news of further aggressive efforts to deal with the powers of depression.

Both the London and Paris markets improved substantially, in sympathy with New York, although President Hoover explained that conferences of bankers and political leaders in Washington were primarily to deal with the domestic situation. The bond market also brightened.

Prominent stocks rushed up about 2 to 16 points. They slipped back a little from the best momentarily, as trading quieted down somewhat after midday, but the advance was quickly resumed. Price averages at 1 p. m. indicated an average rise of more than 5 points.

Defensive stocks shot up 16 points, on news of the regular quarterly dividend of $2.50, Union Pacific rushed up more than 10. Miscellaneous issues rising about 5 to 8 included U. S. Steel, American Telephone, American Can, North American, Westinghouse, Woolworth, consolidated, Gas, American Tobacco "B" Southern Pacific, New York Central Eastern, and General Motors nearly as much.

After its long ordeal of bad news and nervous selling, the market displayed tremendous relief at the news that aggressive and constructive measures were under consideration, although rumors as to the nature of measures considered were of the vaguest nature.

Deflation begins to work in a vicious circle in times of bad public psychology, and the market's reaction to the news that the government was to take action to prevent short selling that would depress the market was highly constructive, even though Wall Street is traditionally opposed to artificial restriction of trading in normal times.

The money market was slightly firmer today. There was no call money offered in the outside market under the official rate of 1 1/2 percent.

PRICES ADVANCE ON NEW YORK BOND MART

New York.—(P)—The bond market advanced irregularly today on moderate activity.

Foreign obligations made some of the largest gains. German 5 1/2s were especially active and they and the 7s were 2 points higher than the previous close at times. French 7 1/2s and 7 1/4s, German Central Agricultural bank 6s of October 1930 and Italian 7s of 1931 gained fractionally. Belgian 7s of 1930 weakened to 9 1/2.

Stock preference obligations were generally, if moderately, higher but the volume in many was limited. General Theatrical Equipment, 6s and Krueger & Toll 6s with warrants gained more than one point each on a few sales. Atchafalaya 4 1/2s of 1933 were fractionally higher. American Telephone 4 1/2s of 1929 and Philadelphia & Reading Coal and Iron 6s were about 3 points lower.

Public utility loans lost fractions as a rule. American Telephone 5s of 1930 and of 1935, Consolidated Gas 5 1/2s of 1935, International Telephone Debenture 5s and Pacific Gas 5s were affected on large sales. American and Foreign Power 6s and Postal Telegraph 6s dropped about one point each. Columbia Gas and Electric 5s of May 1932 reached a new low at 32 from which level they recovered partially.

The action of the industrial group was similar to that of the public utilities. Armour 4 1/2s of 1933, Chile Copper 5s, Dodge Brothers 6s, International Match 6s and Sinclair Oil 6 1/2s lost about one point each. United Oil reflected a strong buying demand.

United States government issues declined irregularly. The Treasury 3 1/2s of 1941-43 were firm on a sizeable turnover but the liberty fourth 4 1/2s softened on larger sales. Trading in other issues of this group was quiet.

TRADE VOLUME LOW ON LIVESTOCK MART

Buyers Demand Further Concessions—Packers Get
2,000 Hogs

Chicago.—(P)—Buyers of hogs for local packing plants, sensing a light or inquiry for live hogs from eastern centers, demanded further concessions early today. Shippers, who were out to secure their droves of butchers at an early hour, also sought the benefit of slackened competition. Initial transactions were in large lots, but the market was largely steady to 10c lower, by the first hour's trading saw only a light volume of sales. Packers received 2,000 head direct, and 7,000 state hogs were carried over unsold from Monday. Good to choice 200 to 240 pounds butchers were wanted at $5.45-$5.50.

Cattle receipts of 5,000 carried many offerings that attracted both killers and feed buyers. Comparatively little range stock was included in the run and packers received more than 100 head consigned direct. Initial indications were for an unevenly steady market.

The entire run of 20,000 sheep and lambs offered here today was on sale in the open market. Demand was not active at the outset, but the supply was not considered excessive, and while buyers bid lower prices, firm ones were demanded on the better grades of fat lambs.
